TRANSFORMATION

Introduction.

Over the past 18 years, I've seen life from some truly extraordinary angles. I was to become familiar with the afterlife and psychic gifts, but I was also to become acquainted with the value of astrology and numerology. As you can imagine, these are all subjects that most people don't have much interest in. Yet, these days, anything that sounds even slightly strange is taboo. We owe this to so-called scientists, who seem to be waging a war against spirituality. My goal in writing, is to break certain taboos. I'm completely open to answering everyone's questions.

Yet, with this book, I'm taking my findings quite far. After discussing my gift and my experiences with the afterlife, I'll turn to the forgotten constellation of Ophiuchus. I represent one myself, in its purest form imaginable. I'm therefore able to uncover this entire character, and that's what I've done. There's a lot of misunderstanding and misinformation on the internet, so I feel compelled to breathe new life into this sign.

As a shaman, I've gained much wisdom and possess the key to happiness. Not only that, but I've also discovered the true concept of God and the workings of the afterlife. We've been given many false promises by the Christian and Catholic faiths, and the true reality won't cheer most people up. If it were up to me, we'd distance ourselves from all forms of religion. With this book, I'll bring you closer to God than all the holy texts combined.

There is a great responsibility resting on my shoulders. My goal is to awaken everyone to the true reality. Nothing is what it seems. Yet my message is concise and simple: work on your birth triad and make the most of your life. Find your key to happiness and reap the rewards. Moreover, Odin's formula is revolutionary because it reveals your talents and your relationship to each zodiac sign. All this information is hidden in your name.

It's time to get started.

Chiron, the Wounded Healer.

I want to begin with my autobiography to paint a picture of what the life of a shaman entails. I'll share all my unique experiences with you right away. What I've discovered is that you can't train to become a shaman. I was literally trained by fate. As a shaman, I'm influenced by the forgotten constellation of the Serpent Bearer. In Greek mythology, this constellation is connected, among other things, to the character of Chiron. Chiron, the god of healing, is associated with illness. He personally endures illnesses to find a cure. I represent this aspect.

I have ADHD, and for a long time, I truly hated learning. It involved many attempts at reading, and a great deal of stress and sadness. When I was 22, I rediscovered how enjoyable learning could be. I discovered that I'm bad at reading texts, unless I'm interested in them. I typically filter through texts. However, when it comes to images and sounds, such as in the form of a video, I'm able to recount everything effortlessly. I don't consider my ADHD an illness; I consider it my gift. It just depends on how you use it.

I also suffered from bipolar disorder, and I managed to overcome it. I would end up in a spiral of thoughts that lasted for a year and a half. By following an inner feeling, it would take me two attempts to literally write off the illness. Yet, the misery wasn't over. Immediately afterward, I was still dealing with a severe burnout, combined with a severe depression. The depression lasted four and a half years, and again, by following an inner feeling, I would solve the problem. I was free of my depression with a snap of the fingers, yet it was followed by periods of manic behavior. These lasted only three years, and since the age of 33, I have been completely stable again.

Yet, I had to start all over again with communication. By the age of 33, due to the impact of my flight of thought, I could no longer write a single proper sentence. Moreover, my writing was filled with intense anger. I was literally pissing off the reader. It would take about six years before I could write reasonably well again and find the right tone. I had to process a great deal of negativity and I had to come from a very long way, to get back to my old self.

The afterlife on Earth.

At the age of 19, my psychic gifts were awakened. I experienced things I didn't know existed. Soon, experiences with the afterlife followed. I've decided to share some of my experiences. My goal is to create openness about them. In my life, I'm completely ignored, and without saying a word, people think I'm crazy. Yet, everything is based on truth. I'm very open, honest, and direct, and I would recognize that I have nothing to be ashamed of, for what I represent. I will share all my experiences with you, and I'll conclude with my perspective on this reality, which most people won't like at all.

Even before I fell into mental distress, I had my first experiences with the afterlife. It was also during this period that my psychic gifts were fully unleashed. I would discover that I possess four different psychic abilities, each linked to an element. I had a brief but very intense experience with the afterlife. I directly encountered what people would call a demon. However, that wasn't the end of it; thanks to my friends at the time, I also was shared an experience with the afterlife, that I will never forget. After an intense period, I encountered a so-called poltergeist, and since then, everything has been relatively calm. Yet, it's still true that the dead want my attention. I sometimes find myself in an environment, where the dead reveal their presence. I also feel that these spirits know me better than I know myself. Sometimes it's as if they know everything about me.

As a shaman, my fate is connected to the afterlife and psychic abilities. It's all part of my destiny. Yet, it always comes to visit me. To this day, I have no control over anything. There are periods in my life when it seems as if the paranormal never existed, and then it resurfaces to confront me with the facts. It comes and goes. I may not dominate anything regarding my psychic abilities, but it's true that I've experienced all of it in a very broad sense. I'm presented with the answer, so to speak, but providing physical proof isn't possible. In this case, you have to rely on my word and good faith. Yet, I'm writing this book based on all my findings. Perhaps there aren't people in the world who can confirm my entire life, but there are people in the world who can confirm certain experiences and conclusions, from their professional perspectives.

In this chapter, I'll address all the experiences I've had so far, regarding the afterlife and psychic abilities. I'll begin with the afterlife, because that's where my training began. Once I've shared all my experiences with the afterlife, I'll discuss my psychic abilities and explain exactly what it is. I find this last point important, precisely because so little is known about it. In my life, I've encountered many people who claim to have a psychic ability, yet few dare to share it openly with others. Even with me they stay very secretive and cautious. They remain silent and don't dare say anything. They're all afraid that their insignificant reputation will be tarnished. It's also thanks to these people that I have to pull out all the stops to give this topic of psychic abilities a new lease on life. There's no one to help me, so I have to do everything on my own. It all comes down to sacrificing myself.

Shadow man.

My first conscious experience with the afterlife occurred around the age of 21. My uncle had just passed away, and I temporarily moved into his apartment until it was sold. I was watching a soccer tournament with some friends over the summer. We decided to light up a joint, which I was completely unaccustomed to. After two puffs, my world already began to blur. I felt like I was living in the 70s. Even the soccer on television had that 70s vibe. During the match, I got tired and decided to close my eyes.

The moment I closed my eyes, I heard a loud scream into my right ear. I immediately woke up and suspected the person sitting next to me. I quickly realized he was completely absorbed in the match and realized it couldn't be him. Then I thought, "Whatever!" I closed my eyes again, and again I heard that scream, loud in my right ear. The sound was very reminiscent of a gas burner, but it was more chaotic and much rawer. It was a kind of noise, something that cannot be produced by humans or animals. When I woke up again, I saw from the corner of my eye that a black male figure was standing at the doorway of the living room. I could only see the silhouette. It was a pitch-black energy, impermeable to any form of light. In that sense, it was completely solid. I immediately pointed it out and alerted my friends that something was standing at the doorway. They, of course, saw nothing and dismissed it as nonsense. They thought I was imagining it, until they experienced it themselves.

The experience with the shadow man forced me to gradually become familiar with the afterlife and its workings. Yet, at that moment, it didn't click for me. I didn't give all the things I was experiencing the attention they deserved. I just kept going on with life, as if nothing had happened. When it comes to ghosts, I always imagined them to be transparent and white. In my experience, the figure was solid black and made a sound no human or animal could produce. So, I was immediately dealing with a demon.

Attempted takeover.

This same experience also happened in my uncle's apartment, during December. It was an incredibly cold day. It was well below freezing, and the apartment was starting to get very cold. I decided to turn up the heat and draw the curtains. Still, it kept getting colder. I even lit a few candles, and not long after, I was sitting in the chair in my winter coat. The apartment was almost sold, and I had no television to entertain me. I did have a very old radio, but I couldn't find any familiar stations. The only thing coming out of the speakers was old, depressing music.

I was sitting in the corner of the living room, steam coming from my mouth. Then, something truly extreme happened. Out of nowhere, I was overwhelmed with intense emotions of sadness, homesickness, despair, loneliness, anger, depression, and fear. I experienced seven emotions simultaneously, in the same moment of time. I'd been through a lot mentally, but in that moment, with a snap of my fingers, I was driven to madness. I immediately realized I was being attacked by the demon and fled the house immediately, spending the evening at someone else's house. This demon made me experience pure negativity, by influencing my mind and emotions.

Sleep paralysis.

I've often experienced sleep paralysis in my life. I experienced it when I was very young. I remember waking up being unable to move. I also couldn't scream; only a faint squeak came from my throat. I didn't think much of it and closed my eyes, falling right back asleep. The next morning, I woke up completely refreshed. For this reason, I never thought much of it, as I never perceived anything with my eyes or something negative.

While staying in that apartment, I woke up at least three times in sleep paralysis. I remember waking up and hearing people in the living room still talking. I tried to scream, but a faint squeak came from my throat. I then tried to get their attention by banging on the wall, but I couldn't get my arm any higher than an inch from the mattress, and instead of banging, I was caressing the wall. I couldn't get their attention, so I gave up and went back to sleep.

A year later, something completely extreme happened, which changed my perspective forever. The demon had followed me to my parents' house. This time, too, I woke up in sleep paralysis, but in this case, I felt someone sitting on my stomach, with their full weight. It was completely invisible. I was also grabbed by my wrists and pressed against the mattress. When I woke up, my wrists were next to my head. It had apparently primed me before launching its attack. When I realized something invisible was on me, adrenaline shot through me. I then concentrated on my right arm, trying to break free. I used all my strength to lift my arm. I rose very slowly, and then, after three seconds, I shot free. The weight was gone, and I had broken free from sleep paralysis. This, incidentally, was the last time I experienced sleep paralysis. It's been over 15 years, and I haven't experienced it since. Apparently, I'm not an easy target.

Still, I'd like to say a few words about sleep paralysis and its scientific explanation. The scientific explanation is completely fabricated. It might sound logical, but that doesn't make it true. It's also well known that science opposes anything related to religion, but the afterlife has nothing to do with religion. Life consists of the material (body) and the spiritual (soul). The conflict between the two is nothing more than a human creation. In nature, the two actually coexist very well.

The spiritual clone.

Besides a demon, I also encountered something completely different. I call it a poltergeist, precisely because it kept knocking. In this case, it's something I seem to have created myself. After graduating, I was in a very dark period. I was devastated by illness, and no one was open to my story and problems. At that time, I was better off talking to a wall, since it wouldn't give me any nonsense back. I had so much misunderstanding, frustration, and intense anger inside me, and I was trapped in a small space for so long, that the energy started to build up and eventually took on a life of its own. Because of my intense anger, I had accidentally created a spiritual clone.

I was lying in bed, and before sleeping, I always watched television. In this case, it was a CRT television. If you turn off these televisions, you can still hear them simmering with static discharge. It's precisely that sound my poltergeist was using. Every time I turned off my television, the pattern began. This continued for three months, until the penny finally dropped. I finally noticed that it was always the same sequence. It went the same clockwise circle around my room, ending at the head of my bed.

When the penny dropped, I decided to be smart and go for the ultimate test. As I turned off the television, I heard a static discharge coming from my computer. This was the starting signal, and I began to command it. I said, "Now the cabinet," and an immediate tap followed. Now my radio, and another tap followed. Now my television, and another tap followed. I finished with, "And now a tap above my head!" That was the moment as if someone had taken a swing with a sledgehammer. There was a huge bang. I was terrified, but instead of fear, I was overcome with pure rage. I sat right next to my bed, extremely furious, and said, "I know what you are, and I'm not afraid of you." When I die, I'll be just like you, and you and your cunt will be mine!

It seems very likely that during this outburst of rage, I had taken the spiritual clone back into my body. I haven't heard anything from it since, just like with the demon. All activity ceased immediately afterward. As you can see, strange things are happening to me, but something remarkable is also happening. It seems very likely that when I'm truly enraged, the spirits take my commands very seriously. They seem to be afraid of something, and I think I know what it is. It's not about what I am, it's about who I am.

Kidney stones.

When it comes to the afterlife, I have many negative experiences, yet there was also one that was truly beautiful and positive. In the past, I've dealt with kidney stones at least six times. During my first experience, I met someone who was also giving birth to a kidney stone. His name was Frits, and he was my uncle. It was striking that we were both experiencing the same symptoms at the same time. We were admitted at the same time, urinated blood at the same time, and had seizures at the same time. We were completely in sync.

At one point, I was in the elevator with Frits, and a question suddenly came to my mind. I wondered: What hurts more, giving birth of a child or giving birth to a kidney stone? Then he snapped at me, saying: "How am I supposed to know?" Yet, the question stuck with me. After returning, he began telling a story about being in the same room, in the same bed, and in the same place where his father had died. I found this so special, that it stayed with me.

A day later, Frits was discharged from the hospital, and I got someone else in my room. This old man didn't have much time left, and I quickly built a good relationship with him. Not long after, I was also discharged. A few days later, I had to return for an appointment in the hospital, and after that appointment, I had a very uneasy feeling. Something inside me told me I had to visit this old man, but it felt very strange and odd to do. I pushed myself past the strange feeling and went straight to visit, something I normally wouldn't have done.

Then something extraordinary happened. I literally took one step into that room, and out of the corner of my eye, a woman sat up in her bed and said to me, out of nowhere: "Do you know what hurts worse? A kidney stone is much more painful than childbirth!" It was a pure impulse on this woman's part. However, this woman was lying where Frits was, and she answered a question I had asked him in the elevator. In short, this answer came from his deceased father, who took over the woman out of nowhere. The strange thing is that I didn't know the woman, and she didn't know me. Again, I only took one step into that room, and I got an immediate reaction.

Pets.

There's one final experience that was crucial for my understanding of life. It was the moment I finally accepted the existence of the afterlife and that it truly dawned on me. Yet, I wasn't the one who had this experience; it was my friends from the apartment who provided this evidence. I was able to see the proof, through photographs, and I'll never forget what I saw.

My friends had managed to capture two dogs in photographs that had been dead for years. It was this experience that finally made me aware of the existence of the afterlife. As a true animal lover, I finally accepted the afterlife and its existence, and I had an answer to a very pressing question for me. Animals also go to the afterlife. Animals, just like us, have souls. I say this because I've encountered people from religions who claim that animals don't have souls.

My housemates had captured a light Labrador and a black Labrador during their experiment, in full color. It was physical evidence. The light Labrador lay across her lap, and the black Labrador sat behind her back, looking into the camera from her shoulder. Both dogs posed very purposefully, for only a fraction of a second. Incidentally, they were only visible in photos. In fact, in her case, the dogs served as guides or protectors. What made it possible was the family bond. It was her brother who took the photos. She, too, is psychic, and so is her brother. They were brought together as twins during the experiment and were shown their old dogs.

Since then, I have been sharp and observant of my surroundings. If something strange happens, I don't turn my back on it; I try to explain it. I no longer bury my head in the sand when it comes to the afterlife. I am alert and aware.

Psychic abilities.

Now that I've shared a few experiences with the afterlife, it's time for paranormal abilities. In this case, each heading encompasses multiple experiences. I possess four abilities: impulsiveness, claircognizance, clairsentience, and clairvoyance. Each gift is connected to a natural element.

- Fire is known for its impulsiveness. In this case, you follow a feeling, and it yields something special, usually an answer to a question or a unique experience. It always pays to follow your instincts impulsively.
- Claircognizance is a gift connected to the element of earth. It's an ability where your feelings convey a message. It's a feeling accompanied by a command, in the form of a sentence or word. This feeling, which bears the characteristics of an inner voice, originates from the solar plexus, a very sensitive spot located under the breastbone.
- The element of air is connected to the gift of clairsentience. This is an ability that connects you with other people, even those many miles away. It's a gift that transmits everything the other person is doing at that moment. It's as if my soul has been split in two, one part of which has decided to become part of another body. To this day, I don't know exactly how this happens or how to turn it off. The difference between a gift and a curse is very small.
- Finally, there's clairvoyance, which is connected to the water element. With clairvoyance, you perceive the distant or near future visually, through a dream or trance. In my case, it's always accompanied by a trance, which is very similar to a dream state. Clairvoyance is the gift, that would really get my mind spinning.

What I've experienced after writing down my psychic abilities, is that many abilities seem to work together. It's not that I experience one gift at a time; it's often a combination of several abilities simultaneously. Keep this in mind as you read the text. Impulsiveness and claircognizance often go hand in hand.

Impulsiveness.

A psychic ability that is completely underestimated, is impulsiveness. I'm a person who always follows my feelings without asking questions. I'm a true dreamer and I get distracted incredibly easily. I always want to do, what I feel like doing. I've never been someone who lives by other people's rules; I go my own way as much as possible. However, this doesn't mean I never listen to others. I'm the type who, when something pops into my head, immediately takes action. This doesn't mean I always act thoughtlessly. There's a reason behind everything I do and every word I say.

Impulsiveness takes many forms. An example people are familiar with, is suddenly thinking about someone, and running into them shortly after. This is a form of impulsiveness. I've also witnessed it in another form.

While writing this book, I was always exploring many different topics to get the full picture. At one point, I was working on a topic and I was faced with many questions. Then I got a very impulsive feeling that says: Go for a walk outside. I decide to put on my shoes and go for a walk through the forest. During this walk, I encounter a woman with a dog, and I strike up a conversation with her. Five minutes into the conversation, she blurts out all the answers, on every question I'd been asking myself at home. I've experienced this phenomenon several times

Claircognizance.

Claircognizance is a gift to which I hold myself very dear. When this gift manifests, it commands my complete trust because it has always proven to be correct. No one can then convince me otherwise. The special thing about this gift, is that it concerns things I should not know. Claircognizance is an inner voice that has no identity like male or female, and it originates from the solar plexus. It's not a voice inside in your head. With this gift, I always get the feeling that it's a guide helping me. Something is there to guide me in the background, playing on me through my inner feelings.

Around the age of 19, I first consciously encountered claircognizance. I was already a year out of high school, sitting relaxed at my computer. Suddenly, I had a very strong feeling that I was going to receive a call from an old classmate whom I hadn't seen or spoken to in a year and a half. I then looked at my phone, and two seconds later it rang, and what do you know, it was that classmate I was thinking about. I thought it was quite a coincidence and decided to tell my mother. She laughed it off as a coincidence.

Then I walked up the stairs and stood there on the landing, and I got another feeling. This time it said my mother was going to get a call from a good friend. I turned around and shouted downstairs that my mother was going to get a call from her. My mother stood there with the phone in her hand, and laughed it off again. The phone then rang two seconds later, with a withheld number, and it turned out to be the friend I'd warned her about. In just five minutes, I had two flashes of inspiration that came true. I received information, and with all the courage I could muster, I spoke it out, only to see it come true.

Covid.

My last experience with claircognizance was on January 19, 2020. I remember this date very well. This was the date I first became aware of the coronavirus. It's estimated that it was early December of the previous year, when the virus had broken out. When I finished reading an article, I had another inspiration, and it was just one word: "Bioweapon!" Immediately, the scenario of the discoverer of LSD flashed through my mind, and I knew enough. The coronavirus came from a laboratory. Then came a period where I saw many "trustworthy" people, on behalf of large organizations like the WHO, blatantly lie to keep everything quiet. They were acutely aware of the true problem.

It was striking that you could say anything on social media. For example, you could claim the virus came from a baboon's ass, but saying it escaped from a laboratory was forbidden and ruthlessly condemned as a conspiracy theory. In short, anything could be said, but the truth was deliberately censored. For me, it was the ultimate clue that I was hitting a nerve.

Let's first move on to common sense. What is known about this virus is that the cell and its contents are made up of two completely different animals. It's a bat and an armadillo. In nature, it's impossible for two completely different animal species to genetically merge. This was the first hint that it originated in a laboratory. That story about the illegal meat market, the official location where the outbreak occurred according to the sources, was a complete lie. It was merely a cover.

To understand the story, you need to be familiar with genetic engineering. For many people, this is a very frightening term, yet the process is very simple. Genetic engineering uses two different blood cells. In this case, those of a bat and an armadillo. The blood cell consists of two parts: a cell and its contents. Genetic engineering involves extracting the contents of a cell and moving them to another, empty cell. In this case, the genetic material of the bat and armadillo comes together, forming the basis of the coronavirus.

Yet, the story gets much worse. American documents have been found, revealing that they were already experimenting with this coronavirus in 2015 and 2016. In short, the virus already existed and didn't suddenly appear out of nowhere. I even suspect that the Americans outsourced this secret project to China, and that someone there infected themselves during an experiment. The Americans were suspiciously quick involved in the problem, even before the news broke out. Both United States and China are thus involved in all the misery that would follow in the world. This proves that the United States and China are engaged in creating biological weapons. We, as humanity, have the Gods to thank for this. Thanks to evolution, little remains of this extreme virus.

Karma is a bitch.

I want to end with one of my coolest claircognizance experiences. I was at someone's birthday party, and afterward, we all decided to go out. While we were out, I found myself standing in a bar, looking around, pretty relaxed. There were pool tables everywhere, and I was playing a few games. I was going through a period at the time when I had no money, and I didn't want to take advantage of anyone. Those were tough times.

I was standing there, staring around, a bit uselessly, when suddenly I saw an old schoolmate with a cute girl. This guy always hated me, and he wanted to impress her. For whatever reason, he came up to me all swaggery, and I remember he started to criticize me and made a snarky comment. At that moment, something very special happened. Instead of getting angry, I suddenly became very calm. I literally became Zen. Instead of reacting negatively to his behavior, I gave him valuable advice. Out of the blue, I say to this young man, in perfect honesty: "Hey, I often see you walking around with lots of cute girls, but I never see you leaving with one. I see you standing there with a really cute girl, but if you don't make an effort with her tonight, she'll just pass you by." This just slipped out on autopilot, as if my guide had briefly taken over. As soon as I said it, I immediately thought to myself, "It's true."

He looked at me and thought I was crazy. He didn't see that positive reaction coming at all. I can still see that grin on his face as he walks away, yet my gut told me: Relax, it'll be okay. I was instantly filled with confidence. He walked back to that girl, and I could tell by her face, that he was telling her everything. She started looking at me strangely too, and yet I couldn't wipe the smile off my face. I already knew from previous experiences, that something else was coming.

It's an hour later, and I'm now in a nightclub. The whole time, I felt the urge to leave, yet I stayed. I didn't have any money to hang up my winter coat, so I wore it all evening. I'm leaning against a pillar on the sidelines, feeling a bit helpless, and I see that boy standing there with that cute girl next to me. I then watch him walk away to get a drink. As he's walking away, someone from the birthday party approaches me and starts talking drunkenly, honestly.

He starts telling me things like, "Elmer, I'm crazy about this girl and I don't know what to do. She means a lot to me, and blah, blah, blah." Then, with good intentions, I say to him, "You know what you should do? You shouldn't say this to me, but to her." He looked me straight in the eye and said, "You're absolutely right!" Then I see him walk up to that cute girl and grab her right on the mouth. I didn't see that jerk who went to get a drink, for the rest of the evening. I assume he had left.

My prediction had come true, without me consciously living up to it. Yet, my advice played a crucial role, twice, and fate played its part. Perhaps the most beautiful thing was that she stood there looking at me all evening while they kissed. I could see in her eyes that it was a real "what the fuck" moment for her. I thank my guide for this wonderful experience.

Clairsentience.

Clairsentience is a gift, I couldn't explain for a long time, but I think I now know, what it is. My soul can divide into two parts, and one of these parts can connect with another person. They merge, as it were. I can make this connection with many people. It always happens in situations when I'm thinking strongly about someone, or when I'm near them. Yet, it's a gift I don't like to experience, because I also run the risk of contracting someone else's illness.

This psychic ability, incidentally, is very much like a curse. I'm completely out of control. It also doesn't matter where the person is. For example, I was continuously connected to someone for three months, more than 22 miles away, and I couldn't break the connection. It was telepathically active 24/7. To give an example, I was crazy about someone, but she was stringing me along. Every moment she kissed someone else, was the moment I received a signal that she was "cheating." In one very extreme case, I woke up in the middle of the night with such a warning. The gifts of claircognizance and clairsentience were constantly intertwined during that period. This is the clue that tells us we're dealing with the universal energy of Gemini. This gift brought out the worst in me. It tried to warn me, but I refused to see the message. Everything ended when the truth finally came out, and then it turned out this gift had been trying to warn me all along. In retrospect, I managed to dodge the bullet, just in time. During that 3-month period, I was literally at war with myself.

Because I was on for three months, I became mentally exhausted. This was, incidentally, just before I finished my studies. This gift would be a factor in my burnout that was to come. It also indicates that fate did everything in its power to destroy me during that period. Clairsentience has taught me that the difference between a curse and a gift, is very small. For me, this clairsentience is characterized by negativity. This negative relationship is also clearly reflected in my name.

Due to my burnout and bipolar disorder, I would come into contact with mental health professionals. In this world, you encounter people with a wide variety of illnesses. I would experience that there were times when I temporarily took over someone else's illness. That person only had to be near me. Everything always went well, until the moment I got home and the bombshell exploded. I would then walk around in complete hyperactivity and couldn't eat or sleep; I completely lost it. This lasted the entire day, until I fell asleep and woke up the next morning. Sleep, is the reset button.

The problem I experience with clairsentience is that in my case, it represents an energy that works completely relentlessly and that somehow likes to see me suffer. It seems to revel in my pain and has its own way of doing things. The message is always raw and harsh, like a nightmare, yet my relationship seems to have improved over time. Right now, I'm experiencing thunder at its best.

Clairvoyance.

The final gift, is that of clairvoyance. It is also a gift that is surrounded by many misconceptions.

When it comes down to this psychic ability, they all pertain to me. I don't dream for others, which in turn means I can't predict the future for them. You only realize it was a prediction when you actually experience it. All clairvoyant experiences are accompanied by a dream or temporary trance. When I experience this in dreams, there's no time or date attached to when it will occur. What makes me special in this area, is that I've been able to experience this gift in a very broad sense.

In the beginning, they were long-term predictions. At the time, I wondered what the value of clairvoyance was, since you only discover it, when you experience it. Everything is after the fact. The Gods listened to my request, and my negative perception would completely change the moment I began to experience it on short term. Clairvoyance finally showed its value as a gift.

Basketball practice.

The first time I encountered clairvoyance, was when I was about eight years old. I had a very vivid dream about a teammate. In my dream, he was making a very specific dribble with a basketball. The lights in the gym were off, and he was standing in front of the open swinging doors. Then a year passed, and my dream came true. It was after basketball practice, and I saw my teammate standing there in front of the open swinging doors of the gym, with the lights off. Out of nowhere, he suddenly made that very specific dribble. As this happened, I immediately fell into a brief trance. It felt like a brief energy jolt, and I found myself in a temporary dream state. When he finished the dribble, I fully regained consciousness. I never told my parents about this.

My dream from a year earlier was 100% accurate. At that time, I continued with life as if nothing had happened. Now that I think back of it, I see everything completely differently. The frightening thing about this whole story, is that this boy could have made any choice in life that year, yet everything still led to that one specific moment. Clairvoyance shows that the future we face, is written in stone. This is also called destiny.

Clairvoyance occurs largely through dreams. In very rare cases, you may be overcome by an actual daydream. You're busy with something, and suddenly, you enter a dream state and receive information. By the time you wake up from this state, you've often forgotten the entire incident. Just like with a real dream, it's often difficult to recall what you dreamed about after waking up. Clairvoyance and a trance or dream state, always go hand in hand. Many predictions are given through dreams. This also means that many clairvoyant people, are completely unaware of their gift. They don't analyze their dreams and therefore remain blind to its existence.

Indoor soccer.

This previous example was based on a long-term effect, but I would also experience clairvoyance in short term. In my opinion, it always pays off to do things purely by feeling. I played indoor soccer for a short period, and during one of the matches, I experienced clairvoyance.

I was standing on the sidelines and a defender was standing diagonally behind me. Then something occurred to me. I briefly fell into a trance. I saw how the ball was being passed to me along the ground and how I chipped it between me and the defender, with a tremendous amount of spin. I broke out of the trance and immediately received the ball, just like in the trance. I chipped, and the ball went perfectly, just like in the dream fragment, with a tremendous amount of spin between me and him. It was 100% accurate.

I then started sprinting, and I reached the ball just a little bit before the defender. I just managed to get my toe on the ball, and I saw the goalkeeper dive across the ground with his arm outstretched. The ball went right past his fingertips, off the inside of the post, and into the net. It couldn't have been more precise. In this case, I had a prediction that came true immediately afterward, but there's also an element of having to capitalize on it myself.

The fair.

I have another recent experience, and it was my coolest ever. I was 21 years old and I was at the fair with two 12-year-olds. One of them wanted to ride the bumper cars, and immediately a warning feeling went through my body. So, I decided to ride with him in the bumper cars. We were in round three, and then, out of nowhere, this 12-year-old boy got punched right in the face, while they were coming from the opposite direction. It was a real sucker punch. I was so incredibly angry that they didn't do it to me, that I immediately started a fight with the group. The only thing I remember is getting pushed and falling off the raised platform, landing on the hood of a parked car.

At that moment, a thought immediately crossed my mind. A year earlier, I had also been attacked by a large group, and to my regret, I didn't fight back. This moment briefly flashed through my mind, and out of sheer rage, I decided to fight back. After this decision, my vision briefly went black for a split second, and a trance followed. In this trance, I saw, in three seconds of time, in crystal clear detail, what my opponent was going to do and how I dodged it, before delivering the blow myself. Then I came out of the trance, and my body automatically began to fight for me. It was as if it were pre-programmed; there was no influence from me. Immediately after performing it, I entered another trance.

This trance, where I saw everything for three seconds and then automatically performed it, happened three or four times in a row. In reality, I'm 9 to 12 seconds older than I should be. I experienced 3 seconds of time, in a period of just a millisecond. In short, during the trance where I saw the short-term future, time also slowed down enormously. The only explanation I have, is that my guide temporarily took over my body and started fighting for me.

My vision: The afterlife and psychic abilities.

Now that I've shared most of my experiences, it's time for my vision. What many people completely fail to realize, is that I am fully conscious. I don't engage in guesswork, speculation, assumptions, or beliefs; I deal purely with facts. I don't believe in the afterlife; I know it exists. I am truly awake. I am now aware of the complete picture and the corruption that perpetuates all the lies.

The first thing I noticed is that demons exist. In the afterlife, we have beings who exert a negative influence on the dead and the living. They delight in tormenting their victims. The afterlife exists, and it's clear that at least two dimensions coexist. The dead know of our existence, but we, the living, are rarely aware of their presence. In ancient myth, they refer to the invisible veil that separates the dead and the living. According to our Germanic ancestors, this veil is at its thinnest on November 30th. This, they believe, is the best time to contact the afterlife.

When I look at our Germanic ancestors, they lived alongside death. If I'm to believe our ancestors, there is no heavenly paradise. In fact, in all the cultures I've examined, think of the Egyptians, Greeks, Norse mythology, and Germanic people, all indicate that everyone ends up in the afterlife on Earth. The Egyptians believed that ordinary people remained connected to Earth, and the pharaohs were given the sun as their final destination. When we look at the Greeks, Earth represents all the regions of Hell. Here too, it's assumed that the human soul remains connected to Earth, and only the gods know their own dimension. When we look at Norse mythology, only warriors who die in battle go to the paradise called Valhalla. As you can see, the afterlife is used here as a reward. Again, the normal human soul simply remains on Earth. The Germanic people don't speak of heaven either; there is only an afterlife on Earth.

If I look purely at my own experiences, I have no evidence whatsoever for the existence of a heavenly paradise. I've also reviewed a great deal of paranormal research, and there too, there's no evidence whatsoever for the existence of a heavenly paradise, let alone any evidence for the presence of angels. The heavenly paradise seems to be based on an empty promise.

There are demons, and there are guides. Guides can take the form of an elderly relative, but it could also be one of your pets watching over you. When it comes to all the ancient cultures I've examined, it's striking that none of them talk about angels. So, the concept doesn't exist in our ancient world. There was a time when I wanted to know if angels existed, since I lack this experience. I bought a stone online with a symbol drawn on it. This symbol was supposed to represent a guardian angel; in this case, it was Michael. That same evening, after receiving it, the misery broke loose in my bedroom. I had invited something that carried an aura of pure fear. I have never worshipped any of the angels since.

Yet, my feeling leans toward a safe haven. If that's the case, then I suspect the realm of the dead can also be divided into different dimensions, as the Greeks claim. According to the ancient Greeks, our planet is home to all regions of Hell. This indicates that the realm of the dead has multiple layers or dimensions. I suspect that the safe haven for the soul, is a dimension that is invisible and inaccessible to evil souls. One thing is very certain: the afterlife on Earth is a filter system. Yet, guides must come from somewhere. There must be a place where every soul returns to itself, before reincarnating. Numerology itself has shown that many people choose their own names before reincarnating as humans. I suspect that this safe haven for the soul resides on this planet, and not in heaven. Guides can easily transition from one to the other. When it comes to Hell and the safe haven, both are on the same piece of land. In short, it seems very likely that our soul never leaves the Earth. Translated differently: The Earth is a prison for souls from which we cannot escape. We remain forever connected to this planet.

What has also struck me is that we as humanity are very skeptical of people who claim to have a gift. I know all about it, yet I understand these people. If you don't experience anything in this area yourself, it's very difficult to test its truth. I don't mind people being skeptical; it's actually good, and I even encourage it. But I do believe that everyone should be given the opportunity to prove themselves. If someone proves it, you also have to be brave enough to accept that you were wrong.

I've even experienced this with several men who immediately walked away from me, when I revealed that I possessed a psychic gift. They walked away immediately, both saying they wanted nothing to do with me. I was immediately dismissed without being able to say a word about it. One of those people was a counselor, and the other was my own father.

In the afterlife, however, psychic abilities are the most common thing. Even demons are known for their ability to predict the future with great accuracy. Clairvoyance is also known in Norse mythology as the gift of Hel. When I look at my guide, it has the ability to take over my body. Not only that, but it possesses clairvoyant powers and even the ability to completely manipulate time. To us living beings, these gifts all sound grand, but in the afterlife, they are completely normal.

When it comes to psychic abilities, clairvoyance plays the biggest role in my life. I didn't just experience it; I started thinking about how it was all possible. One thing quickly became clear to me: the freedom we think we experience in life, is written in stone. Freedom is an illusion. That's not all. In astrology, they talk about fate. Astrology indicates that the life we live is represented by a fixed script.

It contains information about our character, karma, and sometimes even a possible mission. In my own life, it's very clear that I live according to a script. The story lies in the fact that everything I've explored over the past 18 years, points to my own hidden identity. So, for me, the mission is to know who I represent. Everything revolves around finding my true identity.

Time is also not what many people think. During a clairvoyant experience, I experienced three seconds of time, in just a millisecond, several times in succession. This indicates that time can be completely manipulated. In this case, time can be slowed down enormously. As you can imagine, my view of life and reality has completely changed after all these unique experiences. I started thinking very deeply about it, just so I was able to explain everything. In such a case as psychic abilities, you have to think completely outside the box, which is something I am able to. After many years, I am finally aware of the invisible world around me.

I have been awakened.

The Sacred Serpent Bearer.

In this chapter, I will discuss the constellation of the Serpent Bearer. I will explore this character in detail. It is this constellation that was revered as a supreme god by many cultures. The Mayans worship him in their great calendar. The Aztecs even created a calendar around the birth of the pure Serpent Bearer, who is depicted as a shaman sticking out his tongue. Among the Greeks, this constellation is known by many names. The Serpent Bearer represents Apollo and Artemis, which together form the element of lightning, and the wounded healer Chiron. According to the Romans, the constellation of this Serpent Bearer is connected to the planet Jupiter. In Norse and Germanic mythology, the Serpent Bearer is known as Odin.

What you should know about this sign is that it has a hidden structure. The Serpent Bearer is present, but to determine if someone is one, you must look at the relationship between the sun and moon signs. If this relationship is Sagittarius versus Scorpio, then we are dealing with a normal Serpent Bearer.

To keep it simple, the Serpent Bearer is always a child of Scorpio and Sagittarius. Scorpio represents a very intense water element, and Sagittarius an intense fire element. Scorpio can be seen as a cold rainstorm, and Sagittarius as a hot, dry wind. When both energies converge, a new element called lightning (electricity) is created. The normal Serpent Bearer, therefore, represents the element of lightning. Lightning, on the other hand, is all about creation and light, but it also represents the final judgment in the afterlife, as in the form of truth.

Besides the normal Serpent Bearer, there is also a pure Serpent Bearer. In such a case, the duality still exists between Sagittarius and Scorpio, but the ascendant belongs to the sign Gemini. When this combination occurs, Gemini transforms into the element of thunder. Thunder symbolizes death, destruction, and darkness.

Translated into Germanic mythology, lightning is represented by Odin, and thunder by his son Thor. Together, like father to son, they form thunder and lightning. In Greek mythology, the normal Serpent Bearer is represented by the twins Apollo and Artemis, Hermes is associated with thunder, and all three together form the pure Serpent Bearer, known as Zeus. As you can see, many cultures distinguish between the normal Serpent Bearer and the pure Serpent Bearer.

When it comes to making astrological calculations, you can study the signs of Sagittarius and Scorpio separately. Put the two together, and you know what a normal Serpent Bearer symbolizes. Yet, when it comes to numerology, the Serpent Bearer is a fundamental part of it. In fact, without the Serpent Bearer, you're unable to determine the identity of the gods. Astrology even conflicts without the presence of the Serpent Bearer. In short, the Serpent Bearer still plays a vital role.

The Serpent Bearer stands with his foot between the signs of Scorpio and Sagittarius. He's in the ninth position, which equates to the number 9. What I've discovered is that this foot represents a short period of time. According to the Aztecs, this period consists of 13 degrees.

Now, the Serpent Bearer doesn't itself represent a period, but rather a combination of constellations. Yet, there is a very important period that is purely dedicated to the oracle. An oracle is a representative who stands between humanity and the gods. In Gobekli Tepe in Turkey, a pillar can be found depicting the Serpent Bearer as a vulture spreading its wings, with a star on its right wing. This star is known as the constellation of the Northern Crown, and in Greek mythology, this constellation represents the Temple of Delphi. It is this ancient Greek temple where humanity sought contact with God.

On the ancient Aztec calendar, you can find this oracle at the northernmost point, and it is known for its 13-degree period. These 13 degrees also represent the total period of the Serpent Bearer as a "constellation." He stands with his foot between them. The oracle and the Serpent Bearer are connected as one. If we were to indicate the period of the oracle or the Serpent Bearer, Scorpio would lose 6.5 degrees of its final period, and Sagittarius would lose 6.5 degrees of its initial period. The rest of the zodiac signs remain intact.

The conflict in astrology.

When I started studying astrology, I quickly became aware of the existence of the Serpent Bearer. I came across many false sources online, so I decided to do my own research and draw my own conclusions. I then started playing with various charts and discovered some remarkable things.

If I use 12 zodiac signs, the elements are in conflict with each other. If I add the Serpent Bearer to the list, in the ninth position, then all the elements are in harmony again. There's another clue to be found, and in this case, it concerns the sign of Libra. This sign is all about balance and equilibrium. In the model of 12 zodiac signs, it is imbalanced. The scales don't carry equal weight. If I add the Serpent Bearer to the list, both scales are balanced, and Libra lives up to its name once again. Even when it comes to the identities of the gods, you can only discover them by using the Serpent Bearer. I'll come back to this later.

My quest.

For years, I've been searching for the identity of the Serpent Bearer, and I was slowly discovering more and more. I'd been at it for a few years until it finally dawned on me that I was one myself. At the time, I wasn't familiar with numerology. I wasn't aware of its significance. All that time, I was purely following my gut, and I'd see where it led. Looking back, I realize that all along, I was unconsciously searching for my hidden identity. Everything in my life revolves around that topic. The advantage of this, is that I can look purely at myself when it comes to explaining character and behavior. Thanks to this, I can partially restore the ancient knowledge of our ancestors, by putting everything into perspective.

When I search for information, I've learned to be critical of everything. These days, answers are provided through artificial intelligence, and I've noticed that only popular opinions are shared. In fact, in many cases, the information shared is incorrect. I find this process extremely dangerous, precisely because people always tend to blindly trust this kind of information. I'm always willing to look at and listen to many sources, yet I always maintain my own judgment.

I've noticed that I always fail, when I accept information from someone else. The best example of this, is the existence of a heavenly paradise. I then listened to many near-death experiences, and they didn't match my understanding of the afterlife. Yet, thanks to these people, I assumed a heavenly paradise exists. My trust later proved to be worthless. Now, thanks to many of our ancestors, I know that a heavenly paradise is a false promise. I provided false information, because I didn't rely on my own experiences. My birth horoscope, has a heading called: Taking the initiative yourself. It boils down to this: I can do everything myself and I can rely on no one.

In some ways, the challenge is to rearrange various puzzle pieces. I already do this with the subject of astrology and numerology. I gather all the ancient knowledge and reorganize everything. I have my own perspective and even my own method. My only goal is to restore the old model to its true nature. Nothing in what I say is new. Everything is based on my own experiences and the information from our ancestors. To summarize: I primarily do restoration work.

The character of the pure Serpent Bearer.

The first thing I want to reassess is the identity of the pure Serpent Bearer. I can easily get away with this, by focusing purely on the three zodiac signs. I'll start with the positive traits and end with the negative. Let's start with the positive traits.

Sagittarius are known for their cheerful and positive attitude. They are known for their broad acceptance of others. They are also always seeking new adventures and experiences. They never sit still. They are independent thinkers, love to think outside the box, and explore new ideas. They are also known for their diplomatic skills and are able to convince others to go along with their ideas and plans.

Scorpios' strengths are passion, intensity, determination, loyalty, and instinct. Scorpios possess a keen instinctive capacity. This instinct is premonitory, and they are therefore often good at predicting future events. Scorpios are also very passionate and emotionally invested in everything they do. When they commit to something, they go for it with complete passion. They dive straight into the depths. Furthermore, Scorpios are known for their intense and complex personalities. Scorpios are loyal and make faithful friends and partners.

The Gemini zodiac sign is known for its intelligence, communication skills, flexibility, curiosity, and aptitude for psychology. Geminis are often smart and have a sharp mind. They are good at analyzing situations and solving problems. They are often excellent communicators, both verbally and in writing. Geminis are often flexible and can easily adapt to changing circumstances. This makes them great leaders and innovators, able to act quickly in changing situations. Geminis are often interested in a wide variety of subjects and are often curious about learning new things.

These are the negative traits.

Sagittarius are often restless and tend to make impulsive decisions. They also struggle with commitment. Sagittarius is all about personal freedom, and living by someone else's rules is not part of that. They therefore avoid relationships that involve too many obligations. Sagittarius can have unrealistic expectations and become quickly disappointed, when things don't go according to plan. They can occasionally be disorganized and chaotic. Finally, they may have difficulty working together and are quick to rebel against authority or rules.

Scorpios' weaknesses include jealousy, dominance, ruthlessness, vindictiveness, secrecy, and intense anger. Scorpios can be jealous and possessive of their partners. They often want to be in control and therefore find it difficult to cooperate with others. Scorpios can have an intense need for revenge and may feel they must address injustice. Finally, Scorpios can suffer from quick and intense outbursts of anger.

Gemini's weakness is instability. They have a restless and highly volatile disposition, which makes it difficult to concentrate. They are unable to make decisions, which can lead to procrastination. They tend to skim over everything and find it difficult to connect emotionally with others. They have great difficulty empathizing with the pain of others. This is not because they cannot feel, but out of pure self-protection. Sometimes Geminis can also be unreliable and fail to keep agreements. This can lead to problems in relationships.

My current status.

Here, I'm getting a little ahead of my final value from Odin's formula. I have to justify myself in this area and indicate where I stand. As you can see, I've listed both sides. However, I represent tendencies. These tendencies are the final scores from Odin's formula. I'm talking about tendencies because they can be overcome if you're aware of them. You can change the value by working on it, but the higher the value, the harder it is for that person to adapt. For example, there's the rule that anything exceeding 20 percent, whether positive or negative, constitutes a character trait you can't adapt to or overcome.

The values associated with each zodiac sign indicate my relationship. For example, I have a negative relationship with Sagittarius, a very negative relationship with Gemini (Thunder), and a reasonably positive relationship with Scorpio. I represent the evil Sagittarius and I struggle with other people's authority. Which isn't surprising at all when you consider what I represent. With my book, I literally go against all established orders. I have to rewrite everything. I'm not made to live on other people's terms. I value personal freedom and prefer to always go my own way. In fact, it's this personal freedom that makes me successful.

I score very poorly on the Gemini and Aquarius zodiac signs. In short, I experience many communication problems and I'm not innovative. It's therefore not surprising that I turn to the distant past and search for the answers our ancestors had. I'm not here to create something entirely new; I'm here to restore all values. I represent thunder at its finest, and I represent the rebel. I'm destructive and I go against the established order. I have no choice, since everyone has become part of an illusion created by the Christian and Catholic faith. Everything must be destroyed.

It's also why I'm sometimes callous toward others. It's not that I can't empathize with other people's feelings or emotions; I just don't want to. This has everything to do with Scorpio's intensity, which amplifies all the emotions I experience. Therefore, I don't want to dwell on other people's feelings or emotions. I want to stay true to myself. In my case, this negative value of Gemini is my protective mechanism. If I have to consider all the feelings my book might trigger, I can't write freely because I'm constantly walking on eggshells. I'm tough and ruthless in that regard, and for good reason. The fact is, you can't please everyone. No matter what you think or what you believe, there's always someone in the world who's against you, and there's always someone in the world who's with you.

Where I do score well is as a detective. Scorpio is my pillar of strength throughout this whole story. Firstly, it indicates that I will experience clairvoyance in a positive way. It indicates that I am interested in hidden knowledge and that I approach everything with full passion. My Sagittarius has all the skills to form an overview, while my Scorpio represents all the details of the story. It is this ability that allows me to understand our ancestors and familiarize myself with situations, in a very short amount of time. The description indicates that Scorpions are good at predicting future events. However, they are also very good at uncovering the truth.

- (Scorpio) I constantly gather facts,
- (Sagittarius) and then put everything back together for clarity,
- (Gemini) and I continue searching until I have all the answers.

Astrology.

In this chapter, I want to address astrology. First, I want to vent a certain frustration. I've listened to many people online about astrology. Yet, I've noticed that many who practice it, completely fail to realize what astrology actually means. They're completely unaware of what destiny means, and I rarely see people address their so-called birth triad, which is a very essential component. I also see many astrologers, who use tarot. The thing is, astrology indicates that everything you experience in life is predetermined, while tarot claims you can change this destiny by drawing a few cards. As you can see, the two don't go together at all and are in serious conflict. You'll understand why I immediately write off astrologers who use tarot, and you should too. It's better to turn to people who actually demonstrate a mastery of astrology.

I also have many books on astrology. Yet, even here, the quality is sometimes very poor. Unfortunately, there isn't a single book I can recommend to anyone, because no one covers the entire concept of astrology. Many books, however, do provide a piece of the puzzle in the complete story. My goal in this chapter is to explain how astrology affects our brain, and I'll share with you the key to happiness.

The Planets and Zodiac Signs.

In astrology, there are three components that underlie the human character. There are zodiac signs, planets, and houses. When it comes to zodiac signs and planets, I can demonstrate their value; when it comes to houses, I don't know to what value they are assigned. Many astrologers also use different house divisions. In the old model, the houses have different values, and there is an uneven distribution. Contemporary astrology has simplified this, by giving all houses an equal period. Personally, I attach little importance to the houses, because the zodiac signs and planets are much more dominant.

In ancient times, people were already obsessed with the starry sky. They mapped it by naming certain star combinations. This is how constellations came into being, and we created a map of the sky. What complicates our history is that some constellations acquire different identities, depending on their culture. The Scorpio constellation, and its name, are over 12,000 years old. Serpent Bearer, on the other hand, was known at that time as a Vulture spreading its wings. Therefore, the Serpent Bearer has a different identity there. Yet, I've noticed that the names of the constellations are very precisely defined. They are, as it were, connected to the character they represent.

We live on planet Earth, and we are surrounded by the universe. Thanks to the creation of the constellations, people could indicate in which periods certain characters were born. We are surrounded by energy, which comes from all possible directions. Our ancestors were clever and drew a straight line across the star chart, which represents the zodiac. All constellations connected to this ring belong to the well-known 13 constellations. Constellations themselves hold no power; they merely indicate the universal energy within which we find ourselves. It is clear that our ancestors succeeded in largely mapping out the human character.

In the chapter on the afterlife and psychic abilities, I demonstrated that life is meant to be a simulation for the soul. The path we walk is fixed, which in turn means that freedom is an illusion. It is clear that our human character is largely determined, by the relationship between planets and constellations. Therefore, it is the constellations and the planets together, that determine which character traits you will develop. I see our solar system as a clock, with Earth as the center, where each planet forms a hand. This also indicates that history repeats itself, because certain combinations repeat themselves over time.

All planets emit a fixed signal, including Pluto. Pluto is a dwarf planet, but still large enough to have its own atmosphere. I also believe that having an atmosphere, is a prerequisite for a planet to be considered important. Therefore, in astrology, I attach no importance to comets or asteroids.

When it comes to planets, they all form a radio station, and we as humans are the receivers of this signal. Which signal you are sensitive to as a person, depends entirely on your relationship with that planet. This means that a signal can have different outcomes for a person. The person might react very negatively, or very positively, but it's also possible that the planet exerts no influence at all, usually because it's drowned out by other energies. The way you experience the planet depends on its placement in your birth chart. The moment you were born determines how you will experience life. There's no such thing as being born too early or too late. Everyone is born precisely at the moment they're meant to be. I myself am a textbook example of this.

So, it's the universal energies we denote with star signs, and their interrelationship with the planets, that determine who we are. If you want to discover your destiny in life, you should turn to this aspect of astrology. Yet, this far-reaching step isn't necessary for a successful and happy life. You can achieve all of this without any spoilers about your destiny. It's time we learn to tap into the birth triad, also known as your personal key to happiness.

The Birth Triad.

In astrology, one element is crucial, and it's rarely addressed by any astrologer. It all revolves around the birth triad. This is the collective name for the zodiac signs of the sun, moon, and ascendant. These three signs together shape your character. It's also called the holy trinity of the human character. The duality of the human personality, is shaped by the sun and the moon.

The sun represents a person's expression and pursuit in life. It's how someone comes across on the outside. The moon represents a person's emotional side and represents the inner self. People often only reveal this side when they feel comfortable with others. It's the vulnerable side, so to speak. Regarding the ascendant, it represents the energy of the soul. The ascendant forms the foundation of the inner personality and governs duality. The ascendant's hallmark is that it always works in conjunction with the sun and moon. It forms a continuous blend.

There are also situations where the ascendant loses all control, causing each zodiac sign to rule independently. In such a case, we speak of an inner conflict. This conflict between the zodiac signs leads to mental and physical illness. My own bipolar disorder is an example of this. It was caused by my zodiac signs being at war. They didn't work together as one; they worked against each other. During that period, I was either Sagittarius or Scorpio; I was never both together. My ascendant, Gemini, didn't even have any right to exist. It was completely dominated by duality. I think it's time to share my story: how, with a snap of the fingers, I managed to pull myself out of a four-and-a-half-year depression.

My battle with depression.

My bipolar disorder began at the age of 24. First, I experienced a flight of thoughts, that lasted for about a year and a half. I managed to heal myself by literally writing it down. Once I had cured myself of the flight of thoughts, the severe depression set in, which lasted for four and a half years. During that time, I took courses and tried everything to get out of the depression, but nothing helped. In retrospect, I know exactly what the problem was.

Before I turned 24, I had a very intense period with the afterlife and some psychic abilities. I noticed that everyone thought I was crazy and that no one took me seriously. I was so fed up with all the condemnation that I strove for a normal life. I was done with my psychic abilities. What I was actually doing, was ignoring my own identity. I literally ran away from it, yet fate would decide otherwise.

During that period of depression, I would have a constant, on and off relationship with astrology. I wanted nothing more to do with it, yet fate would keep sending me back. The funny thing about it all, was that the more I resisted, the more obsessive I became. It took many attempts to finally see what I needed to see all along. Yet, my guide helped me. This guide would ultimately point me towards the right path.

It's happened many times in my life that I wake up with a special feeling. It's a feeling with a specific mission. In this case, I woke up with a feeling that indicated I needed to learn to integrate my birth triad as one. So, I immediately got to work. The first thing I did was study all three of my zodiac signs. Only then did I realize that my signs were in conflict. They were mutually exclusive. Next, I decided to create a profession for each sign, based on their talents. In doing so, I gave their identity a role and a function.

With Sagittarius, I saw myself as the adventurer. The one who is interested in many things. Sagittarius is all about gaining experience. It's a sign that values freedom and is characterized by impulsiveness. Sagittarius is a zodiac sign associated with broad knowledge.

With Scorpio, I saw myself as a detective. Someone interested in the deeper layers and the truth. I'm familiar with manipulation techniques, which is why I have a keen eye for lies and corruption. I want to know the truth and will do anything to uncover it. With Scorpio, everything revolves around the occult and the gift of clairvoyance. Scorpio is therefore the sign that delves deeply into all subjects with complete passion.

With Gemini, I saw the student. It's an analyst at the level of psychology. As energy, it becomes part of the other person, allowing it to temporarily learn from them. You can think of Gemini energy as the air you inhale and exhale. It has the ability to temporarily empathize with others or certain situations. Gemini is all about communication and the gift of clairsentience. Gemini is a sign associated with a thirst for knowledge.

When I read the descriptions, I realized that the paranormal is truly a part of my own identity. I decided to label myself for the first time in life, and with it, a life purpose. I decided to become a paranormal investigator, someone who embraces all mysteries and adventures, seeking to unravel the truth. The moment I gave myself this label was the first time in years that I embraced my own identity, and a miracle immediately followed. Immediately after giving this label, I was freed from my depression. It was literally as if someone had pressed a button to turn on the light. It was utterly radical, and I suddenly felt so incredibly good, that it almost seemed as if I had never been depressed in all those years.

I would then experience three more years of manic periods, which felt like a victory to me. The manic side can be tamed. If you're on the verge of becoming manic, it's crucial that you put the brakes on and learn to rest instead of reacting. You can mentally dominate it. The remedy for mania, then, is forced rest. I quickly figured this out myself, and after three years of mania, I had my old life back. In other words, my birth triad zodiac signs needed another three years to stabilize.

As you can see, the simple knowledge of the birth triad literally cured me of depression and many physical illnesses. I healed myself through the knowledge of astrology. I, as Chiron, represent the wounded healer. Yet, this is not all. There is something else in the universe that represents a sacred trinity.

The key to happiness.

As you can see, combining the birth triad leads to mental healing, but also to personal happiness. Since I finally dared to be myself, I haven't been depressed a single day. My zodiac sign combination is, of course, different from yours, so the question arises: How do you calculate your birth triad?

To determine your birth triad, you need to be familiar with various data. It is extremely important that you know your birth time accurately to the minute. The ascendant only rules for a short period, making every minute count. See the following example.

- Place of birth: Den Helder, Netherlands.
- Time of birth: December 2, 1983, 4:00 PM.

If you possess this information, consider yourself incredibly fortunate, because you are now able to discover your entire destiny, should you so desire. You can have a free calculation performed online. When you perform a calculation, you will see what your birth triad is. Focus specifically on the sun, moon, and ascendant. Group them together as one, assigning each a role or function in your daily activities.

For those who don't know their birth dates, I recommend two things. In my case, my birth time is listed on my birth certificate. If you no longer have it, you can contact the municipality where you were born and, if possible, request this information. If they haven't recorded the time accurately, down to the minute, they've essentially robbed you of the right to discover who you are.

Once you're familiar with your birth triad, it's time for the next and final step. In this case, it's important to apply Odin's formula to your name. This numerological formula indicates your score for each zodiac sign. It reflects your relationships and tendencies, which, in turn, greatly influence how you experience life. Knowing why certain things keep happening to you is just as important as knowing what you're good at. You can, in fact, strongly oppose it, as long as you understand the underlying reason.

Being born a Sagittarius doesn't mean things will come easy to you as a Sagittarius. For example, I was born a Gemini, and everything revolves around communication. Yet, I'm dyslexic and really struggle with writing. It's not so much the words that I struggle with; it's sentence structure that really goes wrong. It's a remnant of my flight of thought. Many people don't know this, but because of this flight of thought, I literally had to relearn how to communicate. By the age of 33, I could no longer write a normal sentence. By writing extensively, I largely overcame this problem. However, I want to emphasize that this recovery process took over nine years, and I'm still recovering. It also indicates that strong negative tendencies, can be overcome with good will.

As you can see, the negative value of Gemini indicates that I experience a lot of problems with my communication, yet writing is still my passion. I find joy in it, something I couldn't have imagined before. I still possess all the gifts of a Gemini. During my university studies, I noticed that I'm capable of adopting someone else's writing style. Before I started writing a report, I'd first read someone else's piece and then adopt their style. It was my go-to tactic for writing professionally. As you can see, I struggle a lot with Gemini, but my innate talents are still present.

What's important here is that you can only overcome this negative value, if you are proficient in this zodiac sign in your birth triad. For example, if you have a negative Virgo, and you're not an owner of this sign, it will be extremely difficult to overcome this negative value. You have to, as it were, master the root of the problem.

The True Identity of God.

In my book, I focus on my acquired knowledge and my autobiography. I've had experiences with the afterlife and psychic abilities, but I haven't mentioned that I've encountered God several times in my life. When I was tested, I didn't realize for a single moment that it was the Gods. I blindly followed everything. As you may notice, I speak in the plural. God represents a holy trinity.

I've experienced many extraordinary things in life, yet there was something in between that I can't connect to the afterlife or psychic abilities. It's something completely different. During my period of mental illness, I was confronted with certain patterns. These kept recurring in my life, even extending deep into my dreams.

There have been four different periods in my life, in which the Gods tested me. The events always came in three stages. The first stage represents the warning, the second stage represents the test, and the third stage is simply the confirmation. It was always about things you rarely experience in life, but then they happen to you three times in just an hour, and then you don't notice them again for years. I'm pretty quick when it comes to games, and that's how I saw this.

Almost all of these events occurred while I was in the car. I understood it so well that I recognized the first step of the process. I then stated that the other two steps would follow, and they did. Yet, every time I said this out loud, the pattern stopped. I didn't encounter it again for a long time. The pattern returned three times after that, and after the age of 33, I wouldn't experience anything like it again. Final conclusion: The message had gotten across.

This pattern had certain characteristics. As a gamer, I'm familiar with difficulty levels. So, that applies to the pattern as well. The first test was at an average level, the second test was at a difficult level, and the third step represents the beginner's level. This becomes even clearer when I look at the dreams I'd written down. They were, in fact, the only dreams I'd ever written down in a notebook. I wrote them down because I woke up with a feeling that told me to do so. These dreams contain a clue. All three of these dreams came one after the other. Here's a very short version.

The first dream featured naked twins. They were standing in a dark, flooded basement, on a concrete platform. Their long, black hair hung in their faces, yet I was under the impression that they were very beautiful.

In the second dream, I encounter a friend's sister, and she, too, is completely naked. Everything I touch in that dream breaks. I'm at her wedding, and everyone starts to absolutely hate me. I literally couldn't do anything right. It was she who stood up for me in the dream.

In the third dream, I arrive at a beach. I walk from the dunes, and the sand is orange. On the coast, I ran into an old classmate, and she represented triplets. Two of them were topless, and one was wearing a bikini. In that dream, I had to make a choice, and without much thought, I chose the bikini version.

The first dream contained two women, the second one contained one woman, and the third three women. This is why I call it my "two, one, three" experience. Again, it carries the builds of average, difficult, and easy. In the last dream, two women are identical, and one is usually different. I chose the different one, without hesitation.

What's special about these dreams isn't just the message, it's the moment I experienced them. I've since lost the notepad, but in the past, I processed these dreams on the computer. I spent the night searching for it. When I found it, I immediately sat down at the computer and started copying everything. I also wrote the date of the dream, including the hour and minute, on the notepad. When I copied the last dream, I looked at the time of my last dream. To my amazement, it was exactly six years later, accurate to the minute.

The pattern of two being the same, and one being different, is a recurring one. The best example I have is three cars. These are three cars of the exact same type and model. There are two blue cars and one red one. The blue and red car come from the right, and a single blue car comes from the left. It is this pattern that refers to the creation story from Norse mythology.

When I decided to look into this at the age of 39, it only then dawned on me that the pattern had been pointing to the foundation of this story all along. It is this story that refers to God as a holy trinity. They are three brothers, acting together as one. Only then did it dawn on me that it was the Gods who were testing me. They gave me this pattern because it leads to their true identity. There is literally no culture in the world that expresses the Gods better.

Vé, Vili, and Odin.

What follows is the creation story, as I interpret it. Before the universe existed, it was one vast void. Then there were three brothers, and their names were Vé, Vili, and Odin. However, there is a division between the brothers. Vé is at war with Vili and Odin.

Vé is the god who represents all matter. He belongs to the club of the Vanir. It means delusion, which is another word for illusion. So, it was the god Vé who made the first step of the simulation/illusion possible. However, Vé is not a god known for his love. He represents the animal instinct and represents chaos.

Vili and Odin belong to the group of the Aesir. The word Ace indicates that both gods rule over the element of lightning. After a bloody war, the brothers decide to reconcile, and an exchange of Gods takes place. During this exchange, Vili, as Ace, transitions to the Vanir. It is Vili who brings balance and equilibrium to all the chaos. It is also Vili who plays with matter, creating the concept of the body. However, it is the god Odin who grants the soul to the body. Vili and Odin are therefore both responsible for creating life. It is the concept of body and soul.

It is Vé the Vanir and Vili the Ace, who maintain the simulation we call life. Odin does not directly rule the simulation; Odin is the god appointed to rule the afterlife. So, we have a red car and a blue car, versus a single blue car. Vili dominates the simulation but is known as the second God. Vé was the first to shape the simulation, and Odin catches you when life fails you. The order is 2, 1, and 3. In my last dream, I choose Odin's side. This dream wasn't just a hint; it was also meant to be the ultimate test. I chose myself.

The 2, 1, and 3 refer to the structure of astrology. They indicate how the zodiac signs are arranged. To simplify this, use the 12 zodiac signs, because the Serpent Bearer has a hidden identity. The order the zodiac signs continually follow, has a value ranging from neutral, negative, to positive. This repeats indefinitely. Because of this structure, the Gods are always directly connected as one. They say, "All good things come in threes."

Here follows another 2, 1, and 3 relationship. When I discovered the identity of God, I immediately wanted to know who God was, based on the zodiac signs. In this case, the Serpent Bearer does indeed play a fixed role. I quickly concluded that Vili, as a God, bears many similarities to the zodiac sign of Libra. When I look at Ve, it resembles a vengeful Scorpio. When I look at Odin, it can only represent the Serpent Bearer.

Translating this into numerology, Vili represents the number 7, Ve represents the number 8, and Odin represents the number 9. So, we have the sequence 7, 8, and 9. I quickly realized that there's another series of numbers that seem to correspond to the values from astrology. It's the series 147 (neutral), 258 (negative), and 369 (positive). Combining these two clues, it points to the identity of the gods.

- (147) The god Vili rules the signs of Aries, Cancer, Libra, Sagittarius, and Pisces.
- (258) The god Ve rules the signs of Taurus, Leo, Scorpio, and Capricorn.
- (369) The god Odin rules the signs of Gemini, Virgo, Serpent Bearer, and Aquarius.

The god Vili represents a Libra, who rules over animal signs and the hybrid sign of Sagittarius. The god Vé represents only animal signs and is therefore associated with animal instinct. It is the god Odin, who rules over purely human signs. This indicates that Odin rules over humanity.

If you wish to discover the identity of the Gods, you must turn to all their related signs. This generally also means that, all the zodiac signs together represent God as a unity. We are always surrounded by the zodiac signs, so we are surrounded by the energy of God. Because we as humanity conform to the birth triad, a holy trinity of zodiac signs, we are always made in the image of God by default. If you allow your birth triad to flourish and utilize its full potential, you will greatly please the Gods. It is therefore up to you, to bring out the best of God within yourself.

So, turn to your own key of happiness.

Numerology.

At the age of 33, thanks to a counselor, I was introduced to numerology. I immediately ordered two books, and one of them contained an incomplete model. When I saw it, all sorts of alarm bells started ringing, and I was soon adding all the missing steps. This resulted in a formula that represents the base value. A few years later, I discovered that there's a second part to that formula. In this case, the second method complements everything positively. The first formula calculates the base values of the name; the second method focuses on master numbers. When you combine both methods, the final values indicate how you score for each zodiac sign. It reflects your tendencies and your relationship with the zodiac signs. This relationship is literally determined by the name you bear. You can't find this answer in astrology; everything is determined by your name.

I've done countless calculations in numerology, even at different intervals, to let everything sink in. When I look at the names people bear, I get the strong feeling that most people choose their own name before they reincarnated. Therefore, I strongly advise against changing a name at all costs. What makes me special and successful is that, by sheer coincidence, my astrological signs correspond with the signs of my name. When a name and astrology show a strong connection, we speak of synergy. They amplify each other's effect, which indicates that I have an innate specialty. What that might be, is hopefully clear by now.

In numerology, there are standard formulas and the Odin formula. The standard formulas partially represent the zodiac signs, but they say nothing about your relationship with them. In this case, two aspects play a role in the standard formula. The first aspect is the name's value, and the second aspect is the number of letters the name is composed of. You can focus on the full name, but you can also calculate each name individually. Here follows the Dutch model of numerology, and a basic calculation of my own name.

1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
A	B	C	D	E	F	G	H	I
J	K	L	M	N	O	P	Q	R
S	T	U	V	W	X	Y	Z	-

- The name Elmer has a name value of 53459.
- The name Wierenga has a name value of 59595571.
- The name Elmer is connected to  $(5+3+4+5+9 = 26 = 2+6 = 8)$  Scorpio.
- The name Wierenga is connected to  $(5+9+5+9+5+5+7+1 = 46 = 10)$  Sagittarius.
- Elmer Wierenga is  $(8+10 = 18 = 1+8 = 9)$  Serpent Bearer.

As you can see, my name contains the same structure as the duality in astrology. This is what they call synergy. In my name, I also represent Serpent Bearer in its pure form.

- Elmer Wierenga has 13 letters and is the same as Pisces.

My full name is in the sign of Pisces, which refers to my interest in spirituality and my ADHD, as in the form of a dreamer. It gives me the ability to empathize with situations. Fantasy is my specialty, but I want to explain this. Fantasy is the ability to imagine things. This term is usually used in the form of fabrications, but fantasy can also be used as truth. If you direct your imagination to practical facts, you are able to solve the biggest problems. You can internalize certain experiences that you cannot experience firsthand. In all my research, I use this specialty. I therefore constantly empathize with the ideas of our ancestors, because they were still familiar with true reality. If I want to uncover reality, I simply have to listen to them.

Odin's Formula.

Odin's formula is a complicated one and not for most people. I've noticed that many people can't bring themselves to master it. Yet, you only need to apply the formula once to yourself and you can rely on it for the rest of your life. Therefore, I recommend that most people first learn the formula in general terms and take the time to let its structure sink in.

However, if you are an astrologer, you are even required to know my formula. Astrology and numerology complement each other in value. In astrology, your innate talents are based on the zodiac sign you represent. Odin's formula makes it clear that the name you bear can also be powerful over certain zodiac signs. Every 0% value in your name represents a zodiac sign you fully control. So, in astrology, I'm a master of Sagittarius, Scorpio, and Gemini. According to numerology, I rule over all the earth elements, which are represented by the signs Taurus, Virgo, and Capricorn. I call these the innate qualities. In short, I have six zodiac signs at my disposal.

The first formulas were very simple in nature, giving you an idea of someone's identity or title. Odin's formula is a completely different kettle of fish. It requires quite a bit of calculation, yet the end result is worth it. It gives you direct insight into your innate talents and reflects your relationship with all the other signs. Relationships are important because they also indicate what you have to fight for in life. As I mentioned before, being born a Sagittarius doesn't mean things will be easy for you as a Sagittarius. Being aware of your weaknesses is just as important as knowing your talents. If you discover why you consistently experience problems in certain areas, it will also become much easier to resist them. It's the reason I'm mentally indestructible; I know the reason behind it. The final result consists of percentages, and these represent a person's tendencies. This latter means that with good will, you can reverse the negative, but it also means you first have to be familiar with these weaknesses.

Odin's formula consists of two parts. In the first part, we calculate the base value, and in the second part, we calculate all the master numbers present in the name. Each master number represented in the name, has a value of +10% and complements the base value. The goal is to extract as many master numbers as possible from the name.

Master and mirror numbers.

Every name is composed of master and mirror numbers. A master number occurs when you find two equal values next to each other. They form a duo. Consider, for example, 33, 55, and 77. The 33 represents the master number 333, which refers to the (3) Gemini zodiac sign. This 33 represents a plus 10 percent in the Gemini zodiac sign. The goal is to extract as many master numbers as possible from your name, and every name is completely solvable. If you have an unused number left, you've made a mistake somewhere.

Besides master numbers, there are also so-called mirror numbers. I call it a mirror number because it is usually automatically countered by its counterpart. However, this mirror image deviates slightly. A mirror number always consists of a trio. The outer values are equal, and the middle value deviates. A few examples are: 616, 363, 828, and 575. Officially, it looks like this:

- 616 is countered by a  $161 = 777$ .
- 363 is countered by a  $636 = 999$ .
- 828 is countered by a  $282 = 10/10/10 = 111$ .
- 575 is countered by a  $757 = 12/12/12 = 333$ .

What makes a mirror number so special is that it has a shared value. This means that the digits that are part of a mirror number can be used twice to create a new mirror or master number. Normal master numbers do not have this property; the digits that are part of them can only be used once, unless part of that master number is itself part of a mirror number.

Calculating the base value.

This first step of Odin's formula is a method where you can hardly make any mistakes, if you follow each step carefully. I recommend that you read everything carefully before starting an analysis. I also recommend doing the calculations on a computer. In a text document, you can easily format a table, and with each additional step you take, you can easily expand the table by one column. The other advantage is that you can use the calculator to determine the letter value. In the first step, we will convert the name to the so-called name frequency. In this case, I will use my own name.

5	3	4	5	9		5	9	5	9	5	5	7	1

So, the name frequency is 53459 59595571. Next, we'll look at how often a number appears in the name. We'll do this by creating a model with 10 rows and two columns.

No.	Count:

The next step is to determine the value of each letter. My name has a total of 13 letters. If we divide 100% by 13 letters, the letter value is approximately 7.69%. We add this letter value to the next column.

No.	Count:	Positive value %:
3	1	7,7
4	1	7,7
9	3	23

Now that we've done this, the first step is complete. Now it's time to look at the so-called shadow name. The universe has a balance value. This means that when you take something, you automatically give up something else. Everything has a price. The shadow name represents your counter. To discover the shadow name, you must multiply the adjacent number by the number of times it appears in the name. Then, simplify this value. The resulting number sequence is the shadow name. See the table below.

No.	Count:	Calculation:	Shadow name:
1	1	1 x 1 =	1
2	0	2 x 0 =	0
3	1	3 x 1 =	3
4	1	4 x 1 =	4
5	6	5 x 6 =	(30) 3
6	0	6 x 0 =	0
7	1	7 x 1 =	7
8	0	8 x 0 =	0
9	3	9 x 3 =	(27) 9

My shadow name may not be known in terms of its identity, but we do know the numbers and the number of letters it consists of. In numerology, zero has no value, so it's automatically eliminated. What we're left with is the counter for our name, which represents a negative value.

The shadow name is 134379 and consists of 6 letters.

Based on this shadow name frequency, we'll count the number of times a number appears in the shadow frequency, just like in step one. Each letter has a negative value of approximately (100% divided by 6 letters =) 16.66% letter value.

No.	Count:	Negative value %:
3	2	33,3

Now that we've calculated both values, it's time to combine them. Calculating the base value is also the final step in this method. As you can see, this step is still doable, but it becomes more difficult with the second method because it requires a bit of puzzle-solving insight. It's literally a code you have to learn to crack by playing with the numbers.

No.	Positive %:	Negative %:	Basic value %:
1	7,7	16,7	-9
3	7,7	33,3	-25,6
4	7,7	16,7	-9
5	46,1	0	46,1
7	7,7	16,7	-9

The Dharma Formula.

This second method focuses on the number of master numbers present in the name. The goal is to extract as many as possible, and every letter of the name must be used. It requires a certain level of insight. My full name frequency is 53459 59595571, and we'll go through everything step by step. The goal is to simplify numbers to form new combinations.

The first mirror number is hidden in the letters ELME.

- $ELME = 5345 = 5(34)5 = 5(7)5 = \text{mirror number } 575 \text{ countered by } 757 \text{ is } 12/12/12 = 333.$

The letters are part of a mirror number, so we can use them a second time to form a new master number or mirror number. The second master number is hidden in the letters MER.

- $MER = 459 = (45)9 = (9)9 = 999.$

The digits that are part of the mirror number ELME have been used twice and are omitted from the name. The remaining letters are R WIERENGA. It is important that you only work with the remains. In this case, we continue with the name frequency: 959595571.

- $RWI = \text{mirror number } 959, \text{ which is countered by } 595, \text{ is } 14/14/14 = 555.$

The letter R has now been used twice, and we can use the remaining numbers a second time. What remains is 59595571.

- WIE = mirror number 595, which is countered by 959 = 14/14/14 = 555.

The letters WI have now been used twice and are omitted. We're left with 595571.

- ERE = mirror number 595, which is countered by 959, which is 14/14/14 = 555.

The last mirror number is hidden in the letters ENGA.

- ENGA = 5571 = (55)71 = (10)71 = mirror number 171 is countered by 717 = 888.

As you can see, all the letters of the name have been used, and we have no remainder. This indicates that the method has been performed correctly. Now that we've calculated both steps, it's time to see how many master numbers we've scored. We have 333, 999, 555, 555, 555, and 888. Each master number has a value of +10%. This value supplements the base value.

No.	Basic value %:	Dharma.	End value:	Zodiac sign:
1	-9	0	-9	Aries
2	0	0	0	Taurus
3	-25,6	10	-15,6	Gemini
4	-9	0	-9	Cancer
5	46,1	30	76,1	Leo

As you may have noticed, four signs are missing. I've discovered that the first four signs carry equal weight with the last four. They are, as it were, connected because the nuances between them are subtle. Aries solves everything with their hands, and Sagittarius solves problems with their mind, yet both represent the same basic energy. Taurus starts a one-man business, and Capricorn leads a large corporation, yet both energies are fundamentally the same. As you can see, the scores work out. The resulting model indicates your relationship with each sign.

Conclusion self-analysis.

In astrology, I represent Sagittarius, Scorpio, and Gemini. It's clear that I have a difficult relationship with Sagittarius, yet I can easily overcome this negative value. When it comes to the value of Aries, it's a completely different story, because I don't rule this sign. My biggest weakness is Gemini, which is all about communication. I experience a lot of problems in the area of communication, precisely because of this value. Yet, I can also overcome this value by writing a lot. After all, I am and always will be a Gemini.

I have mastered Scorpio thanks to astrology, and my name indicates that I utilize this sign in its positive aspect. This score of +10% indicates that I have the talent of a detective. I have the ability to see through lies by focusing on the details. The value of Serpent Bearer indicates that I have a talent for psychic abilities. It's the Serpent Bearer, which represents occult knowledge and wisdom.

Each score that represents zero percent represents a zodiac sign you've mastered. In my case, I'm a master of all the earth elements. I rule Taurus, Virgo, and Capricorn. Symbolically, you could translate it as follows: As a thunder and lightning type, I rule the Earth.

I score very poorly on Aquarius. It represents independence, an innovative spirit, and is known for its progressive ideas. It's entirely about innovation. I don't meet any of these criteria; in fact, my goal is to restore the value of old ideas. When it comes to my independence, I'm permanently dependent on benefits. Physically, I'm permanently disabled by illness, but mentally, I still embrace every challenge.

Body and soul.

Vili is the God who represents the body and evolution. I score negatively on all the zodiac signs he represents, with a fixed value of 9 percent. This indicates that my soul and body have a very poor relationship. I am mentally too dominant and extreme for my body. I exhaust my body by default. I've been in various situations where it became clear to me that my body can have a will of its own. This aspect of having a weak body is part of being a wounded healer.

Whenever I'm irritated, my body tends to react reflexively. I'll give a few examples. In the distant past, I was bothered by a super-intelligent mosquito. If I found a mosquito in my bedroom in the evening, I wouldn't sleep until I'd swatted it. However, one mosquito was incredibly clever. Every time I turned off the light, it started buzzing. When I turned the light on, it immediately stopped. I searched for three days and couldn't find it. On the third night, I woke up to the buzzing of the mosquito. I was lying in bed and quickly realized that turning on the light was pointless. Instead, I decided to focus on the mosquito, listening purely with my ears. I grew increasingly angry, and before I knew it, I was grabbing it out of the air with my thumb and index finger, purely by sound. It was my body acting reflexively.

I also once knocked someone out cold from my bike, purely reflexively. It was a group of young people being annoying, and I saw the trouble coming. There was a girl in the group, so some of the guys were trying to act extra tough. I arrived on my bike in the bike lane, and these young people refused to move out of my way. I started pedaling harder and harder. A few meters before I arrived, the group stepped aside, except for one person. This one thought it was clever to startle me. He stepped out of my way and poked his head forward to boo. The moment he said "B," my fist was on his face. I turned around, and he was lying so knocked out in the grass next to the bike lane that he couldn't get up at all. Again, this was a pure bodily reflex, and I was shocked by my own reaction. Yet, I didn't regret it at all afterward.

There are many more extreme situations where my body completely took over. During the flight of thoughts, it was my body that determined my actions, and as a soul, I was trapped in a body I had no influence over. However, I consciously endured all the misery of the flight of thoughts. It's a kind of coma. You're unable to react properly, but you're still aware of your surroundings. My body hijacked my soul for a year and a half.

There's another extreme situation where, again, my body temporarily took over, literally. I worked at a printing company, and the stress of driving had been too much for me for a long time. Yet, mentally, I always persevere and don't give up. At one point, the misery had become so intense that my soul turned inward. My soul was suspended for three days. It was present, but simultaneously absent. If someone asked me a question, my body automatically responded. I then had to repeatedly review what I was asked and how I responded, before returning to the state of suspension. Each time, everything turned out fine. What this experience also indicates is that the body seems to be pre-programmed, down to the smallest detail.

THUNDER

Nemesis.

In this chapter, I'm going to hit hard. I'm going to unleash my inner thunder. If you look at my message, in which I refer to astrology and numerology, it becomes clear that you only find God when you utilize yourself to your fullest potential. The answer to everything is called spirituality. I've even managed to completely uncover the identity of God. I don't find all these things in religion.

My message completely contradicts what everyone is led to believe. Not only that, but it was Christianity that, in the year 1100 after Augustus, caused me, as Serpent Bearer, to be erased from history. As a zodiac sign, I was banned from worship. As you can see, the battle has become very personal. The honor is therefore mine to wipe these two religions off the face of the earth, once and for all. As oracle of the Gods, I take on the role of the Antichrist, with all the love in this world. It has also become clear to me, that God wants to partially bring us back to our old ways of thinking. The old knowledge needs to be restored. Astrology is a subject that is very essential in my life and in the eyes of God. Astrology and numerology clearly indicate the building code of this reality. Whoever dominates human thought, dominates everything.

In this day and age, my fellow human beings are completely unaware of reality. They have all been unconsciously indoctrinated by the ideas of the Christian faith. I can say this because I was in the same position. I had to let go of everything I thought I knew and start all over again. The story I know now, doesn't please anyone. Therefore, I know better than anyone, what it takes to know the true story.

My goal is to put certain topics into the right perspective. The Christian faith and the Catholic Church have been corrupted since the very beginning. It has never been their intention to bring people closer to God. Both religions were created purely to completely manipulate people's thoughts. I am the Antichrist because I will put an end to this corruption. In fact, I dare say that the Christian and Catholic faiths, are the greatest forms of blasphemy ever committed by humanity. We owe all of this to the ancient Eastern Roman Empire. It is time I revealed the true story behind their origins.

Many people claim the Bible is a holy book. This is another typical lie, perpetrated by Christians to make themselves important. These people all make claims to glorify themselves. They resort to anything out of sheer desperation. For example, we are taught that Jesus was born around the beginning of our era, and this is another such lie. The Bible is nothing more than a collection of very old texts, and no story is complete. In fact, most stories are deeply flawed and have even been modified over time. The story of Adam and Eve, no longer corresponds to the original story at all. The Bible is also not the word of God, as many blindly assume. The texts that exist in the Bible, were never created with the intention of ending up in the Bible. Their origins are completely separate from the Catholic and Christian faith, yet the Bible appropriates these texts as if it had conceived and have written these texts themselves.

The Bible is also correct in some cases. This, in turn, has everything to do with the story they've borrowed from other cultures. The stories in the Bible are partly true, because these texts are based on ancient traditions and historical events, that go back many thousands of years. I can give a very good example of this when it comes to ancient traditions.

I've studied the Aztec calendar and have concluded that this calendar marks the birth of the pure shaman. If you look closely at this calendar, you'll see three elements. You see fire, water, and air, which are the basic elements of lightning. At the northernmost point, the water and fire flow down over the shaman's head. In other words, the shaman is baptized in the elements of fire and water. The tradition of baptism, therefore, is not specific to the Catholic Church. It also makes it clear that baptizing someone is equivalent to canonizing that person. What makes it all so special is that two cultures use the same ancient traditions, while they are unaware of each other's existence.

The Eastern Roman Empire.

The point where everything went wrong was the birth of the Roman Empire. From the very beginning, this empire always aimed to deceive its people. In Rome, everything revolved around possessing ultimate power, and some figures took this to extremes. The Roman Empire was founded by Julius Caesar. He had a disciple, and his name was Augustus. Julius Caesar was not only a military leader; he also had a true obsession with time, something I seem to share. He invented a new lunar calendar and wanted to start a new era. Before he could implement his ideas, he was murdered by his own circle, stabbed multiple times. A few decades after his death, Augustus would finally implement his ideas.

It was Augustus who introduced the new era, in honor of Julius Caesar. This new era, therefore, has nothing to do with the birth of Jesus, as Christians claim. It is another form of self-glorification. In fact, Jesus and Mary did not even exist at that time. A characteristic that Augustus ushered in the new era, can be found as a clue in our monthly calendar. Julius was given the month of July, and this month is succeeded by August.

While the Greeks worshipped the constellations, the Romans worshipped the planets of our solar system. Astrology today revolves around constellations and planetary positions. Every culture held a piece of the puzzle. While the Germanic peoples and the Greeks worshipped Odin and Zeus, Jupiter was the god of the Romans, who also ruled over the elements of thunder and lightning. The Greeks worshipped the constellations, the Germanic people were familiar with the Holy Trinity, and the Romans worshipped the planets. So far, everything has been going well, but all this changes with the arrival of a figure named Constantine the Great.

Constantine was born in an inn, and his father was a high-ranking military leader. Constantine was mad for his mother and resented his father. During a battle, his father died, and Constantine took over as a leader. It's well known that Constantine suffered from a true God complex. Around 330 AD, he proclaimed himself to be the son of God, and it didn't stop there. As a Roman leader, he realized that the people were more afraid of God, than of their leader. Constantine lacked ultimate power. Instead of banning religion, he decided to start two religions of his own. One religion worshipped Constantine, and the other worshipped his mother, Helena. Clearly, Constantine wanted to be worshipped as a god.

The city of Constantinople is named after him, indicating that Constantine was considered a true hero within the Empire. He was also a true idol in the later Eastern Roman Empire. However, people at that time were not fools. Everyone refused to convert to the religions Constantine had established. People did not abandon their old gods. Both religions quickly died out. Yet, the concept of religion as a means of power was born here.

About a hundred years later, the Roman Empire came to an end when it was defeated by Germanic tribes. It is a crucial element in the entire story. This defeat marked the end of the Roman Empire. It is this event that the Romans would never forget. It deeply damaged their pride. It was the greatest humiliation they had ever suffered. What many people do not know is that the Romans were instrumental in falsifying history. There were even punishments where a person's existence was completely erased. If you were a Roman leader and you were recorded in the records, every document about you was destroyed. It's also known that the Romans only shared their victories; defeat was never mentioned. In short, this people presented themselves in every way as better and more successful, than they actually were.

This entire story I've shared so far contains several crucial details. These are details that many have never noticed. After the Roman Empire was defeated, it was split into two parts. In this story, the Eastern Roman Empire emerged, which committed the greatest form of blasphemy. Their defeat against the Germanic people, so severely damaged their pride, that they devised a true plan of revenge, one that still exerts its influence today. Their goal was to wipe all Germanic history off the face of the earth. Consequently, only three ancient writings remain that tell us anything about our Germanic ancestors. They destroyed the true identity of God, and they gave their own false idols in return.

Memoriam eradere.

This is the story I see. It's clear that the Eastern Roman Empire obsessively venerated its heroes. In this case, it involves two figures: Julius Caesar, the founder of the Empire, and Constantine, who claims to be the son of God. It was Constantine, in particular, who was revered as a true idol, even many centuries after his death.

So, it was Constantine who initiated the concept of religion as a means of power. This plan was revived around the year 800 AD, but under a completely different identity. Constantine was exchanged for Jesus Christ, and his mother, Helena, was exchanged for Mary. As you can see, it still has the same structure: you have the son of God and the mother. They had learned that people did not convert voluntarily, so the Romans decided to destroy all existing sources of historical events and knowledge. They wanted people to no longer be able to rely on their own gods, so they could give their own false idols in return. The large-scale destruction of historical data is called memoriam eradere.

The Romans took over 300 years to destroy all sources of Germanic mythology. This is also the reason why very little is known about our Germanic ancestors. It was one giant terrorist organization. Another example is the Library of Alexandria. It was a library where all the world's knowledge came together. This library was also deliberately destroyed by the Romans. As you can see, there was absolutely no respect for people with different beliefs or their history. It possesses all the characteristics of the devil.

What makes it all even stranger is the story of Jesus, which says he died for our sins. Remember, we are still dealing with very proud Romans here. The only hero who died in Rome and sacrificed his life for the Empire, was Julius Caesar. Like Jesus, he was betrayed by his own people. Did you notice that the birth of Jesus Christ, which is associated with the beginning of the new era, bears the same initials as the Roman idol Julius Caesar? Is this pure coincidence? I suspect not.

Christianity and the Catholic Church are purely dedicated to the veneration of Roman heroes, who hide under a different identity. This also demonstrates that Jesus could never have existed. All the stories surrounding Jesus Christ, originate from the Dark Ages and later. What history has shown is that the church engaged in pure fear politics. The motto was: Pray to Jesus or pay with your life. The church tolerated no opposition from anyone. Anyone who opposed the church was killed, including other family members. In short, people had no choice but to convert to Christianity and the Catholic faith.

So, what happened? The Eastern Roman Empire first destroyed all historical sources and then replaced them with a Bible. As Germanic peoples, we've not only lost our connection to our ancestors and the concept of God, we've also begun to venerate false Roman idols.

Illusion: The devil's instrument.

They say illusion is the devil's instrument. This is true, because the God Ve is a delusion. The illusion humanity is living in, is enormous today. Everything is divided, and no one is right. People think and talk to each other en masse, that religion brings them closer to God, while I consider religion the source of all evil.

The story of the Bible becomes even more painful. The ancient Jews were once barbarians. They lived in tribes and committed pure genocide against Egyptian tribes. Even then, the Jews considered themselves superior to all other races. By genocide, I mean that all life was killed, from man to woman, child to animal. Everything was ruthlessly slaughtered, without any form of forgiveness.

When the Tower of Babylon was still standing, the Jews were held captive there. All world cultures came together in Babylon. Babylon is therefore known for the many different gods that were worshipped there. Each culture brought its own gods, and everyone accepted each other. There was no fighting, only respect. It was the first example of a successful multicultural society.

At one point, a tremendous storm occurred, and the Tower of Babel collapsed. It was just like the American Twin Towers, both of which I saw collapse live on television. Just as then, everyone was in a state of grief, but the Jews celebrated. From that moment on, the Jews began to worship a storm god known as YHWH. His name is pronounced like a sigh, as if you were blowing something over. You inhale briefly (Ya) and then exhale sharply (Hoo). The name and worship of this YHWH were immediately forbidden, and the Jews would henceforth only address him by a title.

The Bible doesn't mention God, yet they all pray to the Lord. You probably already see it coming: the Lord in the Bible is represented by the Jewish God YHWH. It is therefore also a reference to the identity of Ve, which partly represents the same qualities. In the Bible, the devil is enthroned, as in the form of the savior of humanity. Do you now understand my role as the antichrist?

My conclusion regarding religion:

As I mentioned before, Christians and Catholics tend to glorify themselves. They claim their faith is 2,000 years old, while Christianity only began to take shape around the year 800 AD. Only then did the first signs begin to appear. I am therefore aware that these two religions are instruments of the devil.

On the internet, I follow many stories of people who claim to have worshipped the devil and were later saved by converting to Christianity, unaware, of course, that the Bible is also an instrument of the devil. They all claim to be Jesus' best friend and enthrone this false idol without a moment's critical thought. In short, it doesn't matter whether you go right or left, you're always wrong. As you can imagine, the devil has checkmated most people. My advice, therefore, is that you are always better off without religion. Don't let it dominate your thoughts, because you will only be disappointed. This will become clear in the chapter that follows.

When I look at God and his identity, it's striking that fate does its best to convey this to people. Every culture receives a hint. The gods want us to be familiar with their identity and for us, as humans, to become aware of the old values. Our ancestors were right about almost everything. The Greeks were familiar with the values of the constellations, the Germanic people were familiar with the entire afterlife, Norse mythology was familiar with the true Holy Trinity, and the Romans brought the aspect of the planets. If all four had peacefully come together, they would have possessed the entire truth. It is clear that we all must learn to work together and bring all our ideas together if we are to unravel the true reality. In short, everyone must return to the old values of our ancestors, not so much in lifestyle, but certainly in knowledge.

As you can see, there is a story behind it, based on pure revenge. It is the characteristic of Scorpio. The Eastern Roman Empire deliberately led everyone to worship the devil and false idols. As a result, people have become completely alienated from the afterlife, psychic abilities, astrology, and numerology. In short, we can start all over again. I hope I've awakened you, the reader.

It's also insane to think that the Roman Empire destroyed all the history of other cultures, yet they even have a library in the Vatican that no one is allowed to touch. It's quite possible that documents about our ancestors still exist. In short, they're hiding something, and it's time for this library to be completely released. If it were up to me, the Vatican's charade and their fairytale, would be a thing of the past.

Greetings from the Antichrist.

The creation story.

If you destroy something, it's only right to give something back. I have the talent of a true detective. It's ingrained in me. I'm always searching for the truth, no matter how harsh it may be. I learned from a young age to always think critically. As I get older, I've become increasingly cautious about what people say. My specialty is seeing connections between other subjects with the smallest details. I know the bigger picture, and the details tell the story. As I mentioned before, little remains of Germanic mythology. Many stories are no longer traceable. We have to work purely with details. Yet, it's true that the Greeks and Norse mythology had roughly the same beliefs. They both believed in the Holy Trinity, which is the true identity of God, yet each has its own form. If I want to unravel Norse mythology, I have to look to the ancient Greeks. In this chapter, I set myself the goal of connecting ancient Greek myth with Norse myth.

During my life, I've often been referred to the creation story of Norse mythology. It was the Gods themselves who gave me this hint. Yet, very little of this story remains. God represents a holy trinity, consisting of the Gods Ve, Vili, and Odin. When I look at Greek mythology, it seems they share roughly the same foundation. In this case, I'm turning to the story of the primordial Gods, and I see many similarities between the two sources. I'm going to partially rewrite the creation story, based on the value of life, as I understand it.

Chaos, time, and dimensions.

I found the family tree of the primordial Gods from Greek mythology online. It's striking that the concept of time plays a subordinate role. It's listed as an element in the wrong section. The concept of dimensions is also missing. On this planet, the living live alongside the dead. It's proof of existence. In Germanic mythology, this idea was very common. They prepared a table for the dead with fresh food at every meal, so they could still be part of the family. In their belief, every house was possessed by deceased family members and pets. What's also striking is that in their belief, there's no concept of a heavenly paradise. Every soul remains forever connected to planet Earth.

Yet, the concept of time and dimensions does exist. It's the Irminsacho, the cosmic tree, that forms a bridge between the different dimensions. It also represents the full aspect of time. The cosmic tree was guarded by three female serpents, who represent the present, past, and future. The Serpent represents paranormal gifts, the occult, and hidden knowledge and wisdom. As you can see, dimensions (space) and time intertwine. Our so-called underdeveloped Germanic ancestors predated Albert Einstein's wisdom, by thousands of years.

Creation story of Greek mythology.

When I look at the family tree of the Gods from ancient Greek myth, there's already a lot going wrong. Among the six main elements, there's also the element of time. The point is that chaos, time, and dimensions belong together as a trio. Time is therefore one of the three components that fundamentally shape the universe. When I look at Norse mythology, I notice that Odin seems to be missing from the list, and as you now know, he's equivalent to Zeus. The problem, however, is that Zeus has become part of the story of the Olympian Gods and their battle against the Titans (constellations). His brothers, Hades and Poseidon, play no role whatsoever in shaping the universe. This story should therefore be ignored.

So, first there was chaos, time, and dimensions. Then comes the first step of creation. It's the moment when two Gods enter the universe. They are Erebus and his sister, Nyx. It was Nyx who first created the concept of life. She created the first demons, for all other life. During the creation of Earth, the planet was connected to Tartarus. Tartarus is a collective name for all dimensions of Hell. It indicates that on Earth, multiple dimensions overlap, each with its own punishment or illusion.

It was Erebus and Nyx together who took the first step. At the other end of the spectrum were the brothers Eros and Zeus. They represented the final step within this universe. It was Eros who brought order to all the chaos and invented the concept of the body. It was Zeus who would create a safe haven in the afterlife and grant the soul access to the body. It was therefore Zeus and Eros who, together, made physical life possible within this universe. While Erebus and Nyx together represent evil, Eros and Zeus both represent love. It is an eternal struggle between good and evil.

My view on Greek mythology.

As you can see, it seems that Earth was intended from its inception as a prison for demons. The dimensions and the cycle of life are arranged in such a way, that we, as souls, will never be able to leave planet Earth. We, as souls, cannot escape from this prison. The ancient Greeks speak of Tartarus, but there is no reference to a heavenly paradise. I am 100% certain that the safe haven is located in a separate dimension here on planet Earth. In short, as souls, we are imprisoned.

You understand with that thought that our ancestors longed to be liberated as souls, and that is how the concept of the heavenly paradise arose. It was the Egyptian god Thoth who claimed to know how we, as souls, could be freed from this cycle. He claims to grant us access to the realm from which the Gods originate. However, it is nothing more than a very hopeful thought, which will only lead to enormous disappointment. My experiences with the afterlife indicate that the Greeks are, at least partly, correct. Dimensions exist, time can be manipulated, and dreams represent the world of chaos.

I also clearly notice that Earth is a prison because of the filtering system that seems to exist. If you, as a human being, seriously misbehave, you remain connected to Hell. If you have behaved well, you claim the safe haven. The difference between the two dimensions is stark. Bad people remain stuck in the life they have led. They cannot break free. People who arrive in a safe haven detach themselves from life and return completely to themselves. The latter group is aware of all the lives they have ever lived. People who behave badly, literally remain trapped in an illusion.

Missions and karma.

As I mentioned before, freedom is an illusion. Our true freedom can be found in a safe haven. Life is purely meant to be a fixed simulation. The reason behind this has everything to do with missions and karma. If someone is assigned a certain life, it's not meant that they miss out on all their life lessons. Imagine if Max Verstappen had chosen to swim instead of racing; we Dutch people would have missed out on so many beautiful moments. This is also the reason why fate exists. Even when it comes to punishments, some people have to endure them. In my life, too, I sense the karma of previous lives.

When it comes to having a mission in life, I'm in a very special position. I've rewritten my book several times. Each time, I discover something new, which sometimes throws things into disarray. For the past 18 years, I've been unconsciously searching for my own identity. To discover this identity, I first had to become familiar with astrology and later numerology. It is my knowledge of astrology and numerology, that allows me to recognize certain characters. In some cases, it's truly child's play. I keep encountering the identity of the Serpent Bearer, wherever I look. It demonstrates how important his role is in the entire story.

All the topics I've explored over the past 18 years all seem to be related to my identity as a pure Serpent Bearer. Even today, I'm still discovering new things. My search for my identity has led to the discovery of the building code behind human character and destiny. I share with you my story of mental healing, and in doing so, I claim to find the key to personal happiness. I claim to fully understand the identity of God, and I claim to uncover the story behind corruption. Putting it all together, I've literally written a new manual for leading a happy and successful life. My knowledge literally reconnects you with God and reality itself.

Zeus and Odin.

I suspect that Zeus is part of the primordial Gods, as in the story of Norse and Germanic myth. Odin and Zeus have too much in common. Both rule over thunder and lightning, both are supreme gods, both are known for their knowledge and wisdom, both form the final judgment of humanity/the soul, and both are part of a holy trinity. When I look at both characters, they complement each other.

There are also differences. Odin highly values psychic gifts, and Zeus is all about justice. To be perfectly clear, I represent Odin. Odin is the god of wisdom, poetry, magic, prophecy, death, and war. Zeus is the god of the sky, thunder, lightning, justice, and order. It's clear that both represent the constellation of the Serpent Bearer. So, what exactly is the difference between the two?

I can say that Odin focuses on the talents of Scorpio and the moon. It represents hidden knowledge, also known as the occult, the afterlife, and psychic gifts. Scorpio is vengeful and has ruthless tendencies, which associates this sign with engaging in war. Scorpio has the memory of an elephant. If you pull a prank, Scorpio will never forget it. Also note his crows, named Huginn and Muninn, which represent thought and memory. Even many years later, it's still fresh in their mind. A Scorpio can suffer from a desire for revenge, even many years or centuries after the act.

Zeus highlights the side of Sagittarius and the sun. This sign is known for its impulsive attitude and its cry for justice. This sign often suffers from knightly behavior. It often meddles in matters of which it doesn't fully understand the details. It often acts before it thinks and, as a sign, is willing to take great risks in doing so. Sagittarius can tend to set the right example. They value social order. Sagittarius is a very fiery sign and is capable of harshly judging people based on their assumptions. Only when their anger subsides do they come to their senses and regret their overly aggressive behavior. These latter are also characteristics of Zeus's character; see the story of Prometheus.

Prometheus was known for stealing the sacred fire from the Gods. Prometheus was sentenced to death by Zeus, who later regretted his choice. Zeus failed to see the good intentions behind it. As a tribute, Prometheus was given his own constellation in the sky, which we know as Aquarius. However, Aquarius is part of Zeus's overall character. Symbolically, Zeus condemns his own character in this story.

The relationship between the primal gods.

There is, however, one character who is extremely underexposed, and her name is Hel. For convenience, I've made a list so you know who represents what.

- Vé represents Erebus.
- Vili represents Eros.
- Odin represents Zeus.
- Hel represents Nyx.

Much has been written about God, but little is known about Hel. It is clear that Hel represents Odin's sister. Both are associated with knowledge and wisdom, and both possess the gift of clairvoyance. Odin rules the afterlife on Earth, but Odin does not rule Tartarus. Hel has its own dimensions, which are dominated by demons and illusion. When I look at the current state of our afterlife, I conclude that the dimensions of hell and the afterlife on Earth, are separated. However, this does not mean that demons are incapable of entering our hell. Many have been invited into ours, through dark rituals.

Hel, the mother of all demons, is therefore in no way inferior to her own brethren. She is just as powerful and a force to be reckoned with. In Norse mythology, it also becomes clear that Odin has great respect for Hel. He is very careful with her. What is striking, however, is that Hel does not rule over the constellations. Her power is limited to the dimensions of the soul.

Yet, she does exert her influence on life, because she has a partner in crime named Vé. Like brother and sister, they both rule over demons. It is Vé who negatively influences the fate of humanity. It is a test you must survive, one that is completely merciless. I know all about it. So, when I look at God, it has an extreme character. Not everything is about love, as everyone assumes. We have Vé who plays the devil, we have Odin who plays the hero, and we have Vili who maintains a neutral stance. So, the question arises: Who are you listening to? Which part of God are you putting on a throne?

My relationship with the Gods.

I applied Odin's formula to myself, and I would later discover the identity of God. I then looked at how I scored for each god. To do this, you have to look at the results of Odin's formula. I noticed that I scored negatively on all fronts when it came to my relationship with Vili. Because of this, I have a weak body. I wondered for a long time why I chose this. I don't dislike Vili at all. In retrospect, I realize that I literally made a sacrifice.

Because of my negative score for Vili, I score very positively on Vé. This, too, was a mystery to me for a very long time. Now it dawns on me that my positive constitution, is a shield against negative influences. Therefore, Vé can hardly influence me in this life. I am not open to his negativity. However, this doesn't mean I'm a saint, because as you know, I also represent thunder. I too have my quirks, though they're never based on bad intentions.

My relationship with Odin indicates that, due to the negative value of thunder, I truly do it justice. Thunder is supposed to be mercilessly destructive. When it comes to being a Serpent Bearer, I score highly in the areas of psychic abilities, hidden knowledge, and wisdom. In this case, I bring out the very best in it, thus fully honoring that sign.

Virgo, as a zodiac sign, represents my wife. She is Freyr and represents love, fertility, and sexuality. As you can see, Odin is associated with love. Anyone who looks at my astrological side will notice that I don't possess any earth elements. It's my name, which I use to represent all the earth elements. The earth element is, as it were, a by-product of marriage.

However, I do want to make a very important point here. I have a shield against negativity and I can take quite a beating, but that doesn't mean I'm not susceptible to Vé his influence. You really have to be very careful what you wish for. I know what underlay my flight of thought and all the misery that would follow.

During that period, I was deeply connected to the gift of clairsentience. I was connected to someone at a great distance, and the connection remained continuous for three months. I was completely devastated. Not long after, I realized that my experiences didn't match what most people had been telling me for years. I felt betrayed and was extremely angry at that moment. It was the moment I decided to start everything over again. I was so angry that I screamed into a mirror: "I want nothing, absolutely nothing, but to know the fucking truth!" Those words are still fresh in my mind. It was that moment that Vé would listen to me. I invited the devil into my destiny, with all the negative consequences that would entail. For six years, I had to simply survive under the most extreme and merciless circumstances. Everything I thought I had of value as a human being, is gone. In short, be very careful what you wish for, because you never know, who will accept your offer.

Germanic mythology.

It's time for some restoration work. My goal is to paint a picture of our Germanic ancestors. I've found a source that describes Germanic mythology and accurately reflects their beliefs. I'll try to explain these ancient traditions and customs in a language so everyone understands what they were all about. I'm focusing on the main themes, so it doesn't become one big information bomb. It's about the general idea. It's my attempt to largely restore their honor. Of course, I'm struggling with the following: there are very few sources. I'm gathering everything together. Nevertheless, I've managed to find a source that roughly describes what our ancestors stood for and their rituals. It's a story of details, but these do provide a clear common thread.

Our Germanic ancestors were obsessed with the afterlife. I thought I knew a lot about the afterlife, but our ancestors explored it much further. In the past, it was quite normal for families to live together in the same house. The houses they lived in also lasted for many generations. When family members died, they died in that same house. The idea was that deceased relatives and pets, were still among them. As you may have noticed, there's no reference to a heavenly paradise. When the family ate, they also set a table for the dead, so they too could share in the meal.

What also becomes clear is that our ancestors were also very concerned with fate. They were aware of the knowledge of astrology and numerology, which shape human destiny. They believed that during a solstice, they could positively influence this destiny by performing rituals. That wasn't all. Rituals were also performed to contact the dead. Our Germanic ancestors were very aware of the veil that separates the living from the dead. On November 30th, according to their tradition, the veil was at its thinnest. This was the moment when everyone sought contact, but not without some preparation.

In Germanic mythology, priests were also present, who healed using sound tones. They also selected trees, and connected each tree to one of their gods. The tree was given an ornament and a name. By naming it, you give it an identity, and thus a character. These trees were therefore known as sacred trees. Sacred branches were cut from these trees during fall, creating a magical circle. This magical circle was supposed to protect people from the negative influences of the dead. It was an annual phenomenon.

Just as in Norse mythology, there is a cosmic tree. In this case, the number of dimensions is not mentioned, but it is indicated that all existing dimensions are connected to time. This cosmic tree is guarded by three female serpents, which represent the past, present, and future. This also indicates that before we enter life as souls, we can choose which time period we want to be born in. We can travel into the past, present, and future, which suggests that the concept of time travel as a soul is possible. Imagine that you, as a soul, can relive all life that has ever existed on Earth. Our options for experiencing life as a soul, are nearly endless.

The properties of the soul.

The soul is a form of energy, equivalent to electricity. It is therefore logical that the lightning god Odin rules over the soul. The soul has various properties and is much more than just a ball of energy. During paranormal research, I personally experienced that the soul carries physical properties, such as a body and weight. With the right intentions, they can physically harm someone, although this is very rare. I know that they represent weight from my sleep paralysis, and in other investigations, I've also heard spirits walking up the stairs, which also indicates that they still imitate weight. The dead are therefore very capable of manipulating physical objects.

Our Germanic ancestors describe the soul as having four properties. There is the physical form just discussed, but there is also thought, the guide, and spiritual powers. Spiritual powers should be considered a collection of psychic gifts. For example, my guide possesses the ability to manipulate time and the gift of perceiving the future. Hell, rules over psychic gifts, and that also applies to demons. Demons can also perceive the future and possess the gift of illusion. They can assume many forms and identities, and can imitate a person's voice.

The aspect of thought is key to the entire afterlife. People who have committed evil deeds sometimes remain trapped in the illusion, that they are still alive. They continue to experience the same scenario, which has led to many deaths. They cannot escape this scenario, and even the animals are part of it. In one case, you could hear horses galloping. The event repeats itself endlessly. When you enter the afterlife on Earth, it is very wise to understand how everything works. The goal is to become aware of your existence as quickly as possible. You must become lucid, and for some, that can take a while.

Joelfest and the Wild Hunt.

The Germanic peoples also had festivals based on astronomical events. Joelfest is the celebration of the shortest day of the year and was also associated with the Wild Hunt. In ancient times, the Wild Hunt was the name for a supernatural phenomenon in which a ghostly hunting party, led by Odin, would race through the night sky on horseback. The apparition was seen as a harbinger of approaching thunderstorms. The phenomenon manifested primarily during Joelfest celebrations.

During this festival, everyone was expected to get drunk, something some people now do every weekend. Communal drunkenness was an essential part of religious customs. As you can see, they weren't so crazy back then. Freyr, a fertility goddess, was also worshipped during this festival. As you can see, times haven't changed; everything still revolves around drinking alcohol and sex. Can someone explain to me why this tradition has been replaced by Christmas?

The days of the week (Dutch).

There is a remnant of Germanic mythology, reflected in our weekdays. Not only that, but also the elements of thunder and lightning, that of the pure Serpent Bearer, have been preserved. The first clue is the duality in astrology, which is represented by the sun and the moon. We therefore know these as Sunday and Monday. Tuesday refers to the story of self-sacrifice. The god of justice lost his hand after taming the wolf Fenrir. He sacrificed himself to protect us from great evil.

Wednesday is the day of Odin. Odin is a Serpent Bearer, whose constellation is associated with lightning. According to astrology, Odin is the god of humanity. He rules the heavens and presides over the final judgment. Yet, lightning is not complete without thunder. The day of lightning (Wednesday) is followed by thunder, also known as Thursday. This day is dedicated to Thor, the son of Odin. If you combine both days, they together form the pure Serpent Bearer. In short, I'm still revered, and almost no one knows about it. Somewhere I still exist, and I'm proud to be Dutch.

When I look at my own name and its hidden structure, it becomes clear that, through my name, I rule over all the earth elements. I am a complete master of Taurus, Virgo, and Capricorn. Lightning is formed by three different elements. The main element is air, which is complemented by fire and water. It is therefore a storm god; the earth element is completely absent in this type. Yet, the god of thunder and lightning, Odin, rules over Mother Earth. Freyr is Odin's wife and is associated with the element of earth, and thus also with fertility. She is Odin's wife. Odin and Freyr, both rule over heaven and earth.

Saturday is dedicated to Saturn, an old clue that the Eastern Romans tried to undermine our faith. It's a terrible contradiction, because Freyr rules over Earth, and Saturn is the god of agriculture. They both represent the same thing. Now, I'm familiar with a story about Odin, which concerns the loss of his son Baldur. It's Hodir who represents Odin's blind side, the darkness, and Baldur who represents love, also known as light. Baldur was the holy son of God (Odin).

The idea of the holy son of God wasn't new. The story goes that Baldur was loved by everyone in the world, except Loki. It was Loki who would kill him by trickery, and everyone on Earth was in mourning. So, if there was a holy son of God (Odin), it could only have been Baldur. If it were up to me, I would rename Saturday to Baldur's Day, and with that, old Germanic mythology would be completely restored to its former values.

Inheritance.

Another thing related to death, is inheritance. When our loved ones die, they often leave behind money and possessions. When we think of inheritance, we also think in terms of genetic material. It involves physical characteristics and hereditary diseases. Yet, inheritance goes much further than that. Looking back on my life, I've noticed that I've inherited destiny traits. In short, you can partly inherit or inherit the destiny of your parents or other relatives, such as uncles and aunts. My mother's side is Kersten, and my father's side is Wierenga. I inherited destiny from both families.

Let me start with my father's side. My grandfather broke his nose at a young age. I don't know how this happened. My father was in seventh grade at the Comenius School and was jumping on a bench. He fell off the bench and broke his nose. Now things get interesting. I attended the same Comenius School as my father. When I was in seventh grade, we had a school trip to Apeldoorn, where we learned, among other things, how to fell trees. The forest ranger told me where to saw, and I started working with a classmate. At one point, the tree started to crack, indicating it was falling. I took a step back, and as I did, the tree turned towards me as it fell. The only thing I could do was step back, and in doing so, I stepped into a dry ditch. I fell backward, and as I fell, the tree hit me full in the face. As I lay on my back in the dry ditch, the tree lay resting above me. I should have died there, crushed under a tree, and clearly, pure luck was on my side. The end result was a badly broken nose, but don't think they took me to the doctor or hospital. I only found out many years later that my nose was broken, thanks to a doctor.

This time, on my mother's side. My uncles both smoked, like me, and all three of us were disabled prematurely by illness during our lives. My uncle Frits had severe diabetes, which went undetected for a long time. The doctors couldn't find anything wrong. He was a captain on a large merchant ship and traveled the world. It wasn't until they visited another doctor near the city of Leiden, that they discovered just how severe my uncle's diabetes was. It was so severe that he was immediately declared unfit to work again. My other uncle, Piet, Frits his brother, always traveled with Frits. He became disabled when he fell through a ship's hatch. He, too, would have been permanently disabled from ever working again. In my case, I suffered a severe burnout, combined with a flight of thoughts. For many years, I spun from burnout to burnout, always pushing myself beyond my physical limits. I, too, have never been able to work for anyone else, since I was at the age of 36. I was eliminated early, albeit with an ulterior motive. Thanks to this limited freedom, I've had the opportunity to process and discover everything. Without this freedom, this book would never have been written. As you can see, I've inherited a part of the fortunes of both families.

There's another form of inheritance. In this case, it's about skills. If you were deeply involved in a particular profession or skill in a previous life, you carry this knowledge with you into the next. However, there's a requirement: you have to develop this skill. If you don't engage with it, you can't benefit from it. This is also called a hidden talent.

In my case, it's all about numerology. It's no wonder I was already a specialist in this field before my reincarnation. In my case, I didn't encounter numerology until I was at the age of 33, and that's when things really started to take off. I completely lost it. At one point, I had discovered five different techniques, but only two of them remained. These two techniques together form Odin's formula. I've tested Odin's formula extensively. I, too, initially had my doubts about the formula, but over time, it ultimately proved itself.

I needed something to test my data, so I decided to watch documentaries about serial killers and well-known figures. During these documentaries, the detective would describe the criminal's character. I watched entire seasons of various series, calculating and testing, only to conclude that the detectives often confirmed my final value in Odin's formula. It was almost always spot on. The only thing that makes me realize, that it can't be otherwise, that I practiced numerology extensively in a previous life. It's my hidden talent.

The story also suggests that it can take many years before you encounter something that truly suits you. It took me 33 years of my life. This kind of inheritance is a form of soul development. If you don't encounter it, you'll never discover it, and everything will pass you by. It's also worthwhile to always do your best in life and get the most out of it, because you can build on things. To sum it all up: We inherit appearances and illnesses, destinies and we engage in soul development.

A circular illustration featuring two wolves standing on a rocky outcrop. The wolf on the left is dark with yellow eyes, and the wolf on the right is white with yellow eyes. They are both looking forward. The background is a dramatic sky with dark clouds and several bright lightning bolts. The scene is framed by a circular border.

THUNDERDOME!

Welcome to the Thunderdome!

I've talked about my unique experiences in my book. According to the Aztecs, I'm a shaman, and that's a hallmark I carry. As a shaman, my life is dedicated to healing, in the form of mental health and ancient knowledge. I've mentioned several times that I represent the god Odin. The reason I choose Odin has everything to do with the name I bear. Elmer Wierenga is an alias.

One morning, I woke up with the feeling that I had to make a list of the Dutch totem animals. So, based on astrology, I started looking for animals that bear a strong resemblance to that particular zodiac sign. In numerology, everything goes up to 9, so I have a total of 9 totem animals. My plan was to use the names of these totem animals to distinguish between numerology and astrology. Yet, I would soon realize that it would be better to stick to the zodiac signs, so you'd immediately know what a quality represents.

Nevertheless, I quickly came up with a list, and I would make the following discovery.

No.	Totem animals:	Zodiac sign(s):
1	Beaver.	Aries and Sagittarius.
2	Boar.	Taurus and Capricorn.
3	Blackbird.	Gemini and Aquarius.
4	Swan	Cancer and Pisces.
5	Wolf.	Leo.
6	Deer.	Virgo.
7	Heron.	Libra.
8	Crow.	Scorpio.
9	Owl.	Serpent Bearer.

Here's my reasoning.

1. The Beaver is constantly on the move and working.
2. The Boar burrows through the earth and is lazy.
3. The Blackbird is the most beautiful songbird and represents communication.
4. The Swan represents nurturing and transformation.
5. The Wolf represents service and leadership.
6. The Deer represents beauty and elegance.
7. The Heron is known for its balance and patience.
8. The Crow represents the occult.
9. The Owl represents knowledge and wisdom.

After several attempts, I created this model and came up with the idea of dividing my name into pieces. When I executed this, I saw part of the answer, but not all of it. Many years later, I would encounter something very remarkable, which finally gave me the courage to take the step to continue as a representative of Odin.

Huginn, Muninn, Geri, and Freki.

Odin is the master of knowledge and wisdom, and was known for his two crows and two wolves. These animals symbolize certain aspects. The crows, Huginn and Muninn, represent thought and memory. They represent the mental aspect. The wolves, Geri and Freki, represent an insatiable lust. These totem animals show that Odin ruled over thought and memory, and is characterized by an insatiable lust for knowledge and wisdom.

As I said, I was going to divide my name into parts, and I came up with the following.

- EL = 53 = 8. Crow.
- MER = 459 = 999 = 9. Owl.
- WIE = 595 = 555 = 5. Wolf.
- REN = 959 = 555 = 5. Wolf.
- GA = 71 = 8. Crow.

As you can see, I carry two crows on my shoulders, and I am a master of knowledge and wisdom, supported by two wolves. As you can see, my name represents all the totem animals and aspects, but it gets even more extreme. I was overlooking something all this time, and it changed the moment I applied my value from Odin's formula. I score a positive value of 10% on the crow. My wolves represent a value of 76.1%. As a master of knowledge and wisdom, I score 16.4% on the Serpent Bearer. In short, I literally only score positive on my totem animals. The rest of the values are negative or master. This was the clue that tipped the scales for me: I represent Odin, in flesh and blood.

Numerology: The Pure Serpent Bearer.

As I already explained in the numerology section, my full name represents the Serpent Bearer in its purest form. The Serpent Bearer is always a combination of Scorpio and Sagittarius, and I fulfill these values. I thus represent the elements of thunder and lightning by name. This is another reference to Odin's identity.

- Elmer = 53459 = 26 = 8. Scorpio.
- Wierenga = 59595571 = 46 = 10. Sagittarius.
- Elmer Wierenga = 26 + 46 = 72 = 9. Serpent Bearer.

If we look at the number of letters, my titles emerge.

- Elmer = 5 letters = Leo. (Leadership)
- Wierenga = 8 letters = Scorpio. (Occult)
- Elmer Wierenga = 13 letters = Pisces. (Spirituality)

My title: I am a leader in the field of hidden knowledge and spirituality.

The name Wierenga has 8 letters and its value is 10. My last name is also purely in the sign of Scorpio and Sagittarius, and thus, it forms the pure Serpent Bearer. But we're not there yet. My first name, Elmer, also has its own meaning. EL literally means God, and MER is the master number of knowledge and wisdom. So, Elmer means God in knowledge and wisdom, and the name Merel means Goddess of knowledge and wisdom. As you can see, it's all a form of pure synergy. Be honest, can you think of a better name? It doesn't matter what you call me, you always call me by my title.

- Elmer means God in knowledge and wisdom.
- Wierenga refers to the God of knowledge and wisdom.
- Elmer Wierenga refers to the God of knowledge and wisdom.

Astrology: The Pure Serpent Bearer.

In the next installment, I'll focus on astrology. I'm taking this quite far, as I completely expose my own identity. Yet, my innate qualities are beautifully showcased in this book. Instead of sharing the entire birth chart, I've decided to focus solely on the details. I've also selected the texts for their accuracy. In this area, everything revolves around thunder and lightning.

My birth.

I was born during preeclampsia. I arrived on Earth a month early. The doctors had already decided to remove me, or my mother would die. My mother refused to give up, and an hour later I was born. Based on what I know now, I was born exactly when I was supposed to be. On December 2, 1983, at exactly 4:00 PM, I was born in the sunny city of Den Helder, the Netherlands.

☉	Zon
☾	Maan
☿	Mercurius

♋	Kreeft
♌	Leeuw
♍	Maagd
♎	Weegschaal
♏	Schorpioen
♐	Boogschutter
♑	Steenbok
♒	Waterman
♓	Vissen

- ✓ My sun is in Sagittarius.
- ✓ My moon is in Scorpio.
- ✓ My ascendant is in Gemini.
- ✓ My descendant is in the Serpent Bearer.

Here, a new miracle unfolds. First of all, I was born in Gemini Hospital, which refers to the constellation Gemini. My hometown, Den Helder, also has very special characteristics, all of which belong to Odin's identity. There's even a full 369 connection. Look at the number of letters and the total name value.

- Den = 3 letters = Gemini.
- Helder = 6 letters = Virgo.
- Den Helder = 9 letters = Serpent Bearer.
- Den Helder = 455 853459 = 48 = 12 = Aquarius.

As you can see, all the constellations represented by the god Odin, are reflected in the name of my hometown. Once again, there's a synergy. My name, my birth time, and the city in which I was born are all factors over which I, as a person, have absolutely no control over. Do you see how fate brings everything together? Yet, that's not all. My ascendant and descendant together, also score pure Serpent Bearer. To understand this, we must look at the Aztec calendar.

At the northernmost point of the Aztec calendar, the oracle is depicted. This period has a length of 13 degrees. At the far south is Gemini, which is clearly at war with each other. It is thunder. This period of purity, characterized by instability and pure chaos, is only 2 degrees.

If I look at my own constitution, I score Gemini with my ascendant. If I look at my descendant, it falls in the period of the oracle. This fact confirms that I represent an oracle. So, my descendant is an Serpent Bearer and not Sagittarius. My ascendant represents thunder, and my descendant lightning. This clearly indicates that the Aztec calendar is purely about my birth. What's also very striking is that my Dragon Head misses the point of ultimate chaos by just 0.41 degrees. I'm staring death in the eyes.

Birth Triad: The Pure Serpent Bearer.

Here follows a description from one of my birth charts. I will specifically focus on my birth triad and the so-called point of luck. It is a short and powerful description that perfectly describes my character. You can see this entire character confirmed when you look at my writing style and the message I convey.

Sun in Sagittarius.

You are a spontaneous person. You are exceptionally honest and direct in everything you do and say. The truth is very important to you. Even though you have no intention of hurting people, your honesty and directness can sometimes lead to hurting them. Your actions are not always tactful. You probably don't care much about this, because telling the truth is simply important to you. Nevertheless, it is good to occasionally reflect on how you come across to others and to take this into account in your communication with others. You have a tremendous need for freedom. If people try to impose limitations on you, you will resist them in every possible way. You want to live life in complete freedom. Living on other people's terms is not an option. You are also not easily influenced. You are only willing to change direction, when you have come to the conclusion that the other direction is the right one.

Moon in Scorpio.

You are an exceptionally emotional person. Your life seems to be guided by emotions, which are always intense. You either feel very good or very bad. There is no in between. Perhaps the most beautiful thing, is that you feel like you're missing out when your feelings are a bit more subdued. In fact, you also long for extreme feelings; that's when you know you're truly alive. Despite being such an emotional person, those around you don't always have to know about it. You are uniquely capable of hiding your feelings from others. This isn't just because you find it difficult to open up, but partly because you don't fully understand your own feelings and therefore don't know how to express them to others. You'll confide in very few people, and even those you do confide in, you will never tell them everything.

Ascendant in Gemini.

You see the world as one big school. Life is there to learn from. You're an extremely curious person, in the positive sense of the word. You're interested in the people around you. You ask a lot of questions, you move freely in groups, and you maintain your contacts. Yet, there's a certain lack of depth. You don't reveal yourself easily, and before any depth is reached, you're already bored. After all, you're impatient and restless. Your mind is so quick that you tend to fill in the blanks before people have had time to respond. And especially when it comes to personal and sensitive matters, most people really need that time. You're a keen observer, and with your sharp mind and analytical skills, you quickly pinpoint the sore spot. However, you're more likely to make fun of this, than to respond sensitively and empathetically. This is, of course, just one way of dealing with things. As people get to know you better, your sensitivity becomes more apparent. This way, your true friends can best utilize your gift of quickly grasping situations. This is also a very useful talent at work.

Pluto in Scorpio: Transformation.

You are always searching for the things hidden beneath the surface of reality. The invisible is made visible. You are someone who can initiate new developments, changes that are dramatic even by our societal standards. Pluto is seen as the planet for true transformation, and in its own sign, Scorpio, this transformation will not go unnoticed.

Work can be an obsession for you, and you are someone who works tirelessly. You excel at analyzing problems and only get excited when others want to give up. You get to the bottom of things. You are very secretive about your work. You don't like others to look at your work or results. You absolutely cannot tolerate criticism, which makes you very insecure. That's why you prefer to keep your work under wraps. A self-employed career or a profession where you can shape your own work is the best option for you. In terms of content, alternative or conventional healthcare, the interaction between mind and body, and self-development will have your attention. You can express yourself very intensely. You can sometimes obsess over things, but you struggle to admit this. You feel it, but you don't want to, which sometimes makes you frustrated. The force field you radiate is immense. This can cause you to encounter a lot of conflict. If so, it's wise to realize how much influence this force field has on others. It's your power to regenerate. Learn what it means to heal and learn to forgive others.

Your social position will radiate power. You'll want to be the boss, or you'll enjoy transforming things. This can range from psychological or spiritual transformation to demolishing buildings to build new ones. In any case, you favor a grand approach and, literally or figuratively, you leave no stone unturned.

Super Jupiter.

What has escaped my notice for a long time is that my planet Jupiter is unaspected. It doesn't connect with the other planets and is therefore very pure. In astrology, this phenomenon is rare. The Greeks worshipped the constellations, and the Romans chose to worship the planets. The Romans' main planet was Jupiter, and it was seen as a god of thunder and lightning. In short, next to Odin, I am a true Jupiter. Here is a description of my unaspected Jupiter.

Jupiter is a wise guru, but he can also blindly follow an ideal. Putting things into perspective isn't his strong suit. He is a sage, not a scientist. Some children are born wise, as if they acquired that wisdom in their previous lives. These are children of Jupiter. Others must first make mistakes before their wisdom can unfold. They discover their Jupiter power when they realize they have made a mistake and can forgive themselves for it. The wise lesson has been learned, they are not broken or bitter, and they confidently continue their life's path. Jupiter is the planet of world travelers who feel at home anywhere, philosophers, gurus, and teachers who pass on their wisdom to others.

The feeling associated with Jupiter is optimism. If you are confident in a positive outcome, you are tapping into Jupiter's energy. He is the champion of positive thinking. That's why he is often seen as a planet that brings luck. This luck comes in two ways. On the one hand, he invites luck with his boundless optimism, and on the other hand, he doesn't let a setback discourage him, because "the glass is always half full." So say thank you to your Jupiter if you can see your setback as a stroke of luck or a life lesson.

In the sign of Sagittarius, Jupiter is completely at ease. There, in his comfort zone, he shows his best side. This means that gathering wisdom through travel and study becomes your way to achieve hope, faith, and connection. This can be achieved by visiting distant lands, but it can also be achieved by traveling in spirit and through time. The fact that you always seem to be able to draw from an infinite source of wisdom, is your greatest strength in life. It helps you cope with anything. When you're young, you might tend to absorb the words of philosophers and other wise men, regardless of which school of thought they represent. You want to soak up knowledge so you can draw your own wise conclusions. Once you're ready, you can emerge as a fantastic teacher. Someone who inspires others with the insights you've gained during your long-life journey.

Trias politica.

In the chapter on the Gods, I would discover that the constellations of Libra, Scorpio, and the Serpent Bearer, are represented by the three Gods. The thing is, however, that Serpent Bearer is hidden. He's there, but you can't see him. All my planets are thus distributed among Libra, Scorpio, and Sagittarius. With this, I represent the total character of the Gods. In my case, it becomes very clear that I am a true specialist.

The reason these constellations are important, has everything to do with the final judgment of the soul. It's another 213 order. It's Scorpio (Vé) who analyzes everything with his keen eye and gathers information. Nothing remains secret. This information is then transferred to Libra (Vili), which weighs all the positives against the negatives. However, Libra is a completely neutral factor and therefore forms no judgment. It is therefore the Serpent Bearer/Sagittarius (Odin), with all his knowledge, wisdom, and sense of justice, who cuts the knot and enters into conflict by forming the final judgment. Together, they form the true trias politica.

Therefore, as a representative of Odin, I possess all the skills necessary to form a wise and just judgment myself. I can approach any subject objectively.

My final note.

In my book, I've been very open about my experiences with psychic gifts and the afterlife. It may be a difficult subject for many, yet it's incredibly important to be aware of how the afterlife works. Heavenly paradise is an illusion; as souls, we never leave this Earth. Yet, there is a place where the soul is safe, but it must be said that this place resides on this planet. Even in our dreams, we remain bound to Earth. Have you ever been to Jupiter in your dreams?

In Norse mythology, there are nine different dimensions; so far, I can say I'm familiar with four different layers. The first obvious dimension is what we call life. This dimension overlaps with the dimension of the realm of the dead. The human realm of the dead is separate from the dimension where demons originate. For the human soul, there exists a safe haven where it can fully reconnect with itself. Therefore, there's a very strong possibility that there are even more dimensions, all located on the same piece of Earth.

In my book, I discuss spirituality, in the form of astrology and numerology. Astrology and numerology, in turn, form theology. Making good use of your birth triad is the key to your personal happiness and automatically brings you closer to the Gods. Yet, God is certainly not about pure love. It's Vé playing the devil. It's therefore important to know that the concept of God consists of three Gods, and you must be clear about, who you direct your intentions to. So be careful what you wish for.

In this final chapter, I focused purely on my construction. In the previous version, I had incorporated my destiny, but I wasn't satisfied afterward. The themes strike a chord, but the descriptions themselves are disappointing. Here's a summary of my destiny in life:

- Descending from the ivory tower.
- Taking initiative.
- Your mission.
- Mother Earth.
- Wisdom.
- The reformer.
- Survival in extremity.
- Transformation.

What my story also demonstrates is that some legends are reborn. Everything for me revolves around thunder and lightning, also known as the pure Serpent Bearer. No matter where you look, I always score on this theme. My name clearly indicates that I am dedicated to hidden knowledge and wisdom. Elmer Wierenga is an alias of Odin. As an oracle, I stand between humanity and the Gods. My judgment counts.

Yet, it's not that I'm trying to boost myself. To be honest, I care very little about my special status. I see myself as a simple human being, made of flesh and blood, who simply has to deal with very complex situations. I even bear a great deal of responsibility. In a sense, humanity depends on the knowledge I share in this book. It's an all-or-nothing endeavor. The only thing I care about is that people listen to my message and discover it for themselves. Work on your birth triad and use Odin's formula; that's all there is to it.

OTHER DISCOVERIES

The remains of the Serpent Bearer.

I've explored many topics in the past. I've primarily delved into ancient cultures to see how they lived. I have a certain ability to solve things myself. I enjoy looking at things with a fresh perspective and I sometimes see something, that others might have missed. The Mayans and the Aztecs both worshipped the gods of thunder and lightning. Not only that, but in Egypt, too, there seems to be a reference to the God of the afterlife. It may be partly based on a chimera, but everything fits together quite coincidentally, and very beautifully.

If we look at the Pyramids in Egypt, they are many times older than we think. In fact, the Egyptians didn't exist at that time. The Pyramids date from a time before the catastrophe, and the Egyptians arrived after the catastrophe.

It's also striking that the Pyramids don't contain a single hieroglyph, nor are they tombs. No mummy has ever been found in a Pyramid. This indicates that the ancient Egyptians themselves, considered them a wonder of the world. They deliberately preserved these Pyramids and then built their temples around them. The claim of the Egyptians, that they built the Pyramids, is therefore completely false. If they had, they would have incorporated their secret building techniques into the surrounding temples.

The Mayan and Aztec calendars.

Besides the Egyptians, I also looked at the Mayans and the Aztecs. I discovered that the great Mayan calendar is built around the number 9 and the number 2. By applying numerology, I managed to figure out the formula in just a minute. Numerology can be very useful, especially because our ancestors used it frequently. This chapter, too, largely revolves around the Serpent Bearer.

I discovered numerology at the age of 33, through someone who offered me help. It was during this period that I applied simplification to many things, to discover if there were any patterns. It was already evening, and I'd always been interested in the annual calendar. I was lying in bed and watched a documentary about the Mayans, specifically about their great calendar. The thing about the Mayans is that they developed their own calendar for everything. They created an almanac, and it was dedicated to all the plants and animals. So, each species had its own calendar. The calendar I'm going to talk about is known as their Great Calendar.

In the documentary, someone gave a presentation about the Great Calendar, and I saw all the numbers going by. I immediately started researching, and within a minute, I had deciphered the entire calendar and its formula. This is what was presented to me during the presentation.

No.	Period:	Kin:
1	-	18
2	Tun	360
3	Ka'tun	7.200
4	Bak'tun	144.000
5	Pic'tun	2.880.000
6	Calab'tun	57.600.000
7	Kinchil'tun	1.152.000.000
8	Alau'tun	23.040.000.000
9	Habla'tun	460.800.000.000

The next thing I saw was this.

No.	Period:	Kin:	Numerology:	Zodiac sign:
1	-	18	(1+8) = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
2	Tun	360	(3+6) = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
3	Ka'tun	7.200	(7+2) = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
4	Bak'tun	144.000	(1+4+4) = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
5	Pic'tun	2.880.000	(2+8+8) = 18 = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
6	Calab'tun	57.600.000	(5+7+6) = 18 = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
7	Kinchil'tun	1.152.000.000	(1+1+5+2) = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
8	Alau'tun	23.040.000.000	(2+3+4) = 9.	Serpent Bearer.
9	Habla'tun	460.800.000.000	(4+6+8) = 18 = 9.	Serpent Bearer.

The formula is as follows: (kin x 2 = ... = +0 = next step).

- $18 \times 2 = 36 = +0 = 360$ .
- $360 \times 2 = 720 = +0 = 7,200$ .
- $7,200 \times 2 = 14,400 = +0 = 144,000$ .
- Etc.

It only took me a minute. As you can see, knowledge of numerology is still very valuable. Think of it as an extra tool at your disposal, in addition to regular mathematics. When I made this discovery, I also became interested in the Aztec calendar. The Mayans and the Aztecs were two cultures that lived side by side for a long time, so there's a chance they had something in common.

There are also a few things going on with the Aztec calendar. After studying it, I came across the Serpent Bearer. What makes this sign unique is that it officially consists of three elements. The primary element is air, complemented by the elements of fire and water.

These same elements of air, water, and fire converge in the northernmost sign of the calendar. The earth element is absent. The outer ring of the calendar contains two images. The one in the North, represents the oracle. Its period is 13 degrees. In this sign, the air currents collide, and the water and fire descend over the head of the central figure, who, in my view, represents the Serpent Bearer/shaman. See the Serpent head pointing west and the Serpent head pointing east. These are the outward characteristics of the Serpent Bearer.

This shaman is literally baptized in the elements of fire and water, or in other words, baptized in extremes and paranormal gifts. What the calendar indicates is that this shaman is a saint. Therefore, the baptism does not originate from the Catholic faith, but is an inherited tradition.

This central shaman is not only connected to the north, but also to the southernmost point. In this case, there are two individuals who look identical; they are Gemini. This Aztec calendar focuses on the most extreme point of chaos, death, and destruction. The shaman is therefore characterized by creation as destruction. This pure period is only 2 degrees, and therefore very short. It is clear that the Aztecs also worshipped the gods of thunder and lightning. The entire Aztec calendar, therefore, refers to the construction and time of birth, of a pure Serpent Bearer.

While it may be a coincidence, but a special number is hidden in this Aztec calendar.

The sacred shaman and the thunder and lightning element.

The calendar consists of two distinct parts. We have several rings, some representing a unit of time, and others representing images. In this case, I'll focus solely on the rings that display an image.

In the central point, there are 7 figures. In the ring that follows, we find 20 characters ( $2 + 0 = 2$ ). The outer ring contains 25 images ( $2 + 5 = 7$ ). The mirror number that emerges here is 727. There's something special about this number, and it involves a technique I haven't discussed yet, but it does have a valid value. There are two ways a master number can present itself.

- The first form is  $727/272 = 999$  = Serpent Bearer.
- The second form is  $7 + 2 + 7 = 16 = 7 = 777$  = Libra.

The number 2 plays the role of connection in this case. I know this technique is legal because my own hairdresser used the same technique on his full name. When I did a calculation on his name, I kept coming across the number 7. Of course, I asked about it, and it turns out my hairdresser is obsessed with the number 7. If you hit 777 in the casino, you win the jackpot. Use this knowledge to your advantage when creating a full name. Pay attention to the following mirror numbers: (181) (272) (363) (454) (545) (636) (727) (818). All those mirror number, have 2 ways of solving.

In this case, the Aztecs worship two gods, known in Norse mythology as Aesir. The Aztecs also worship Vili (777) and Odin (999). Both Gods are held responsible for creating life. As you can see, everything comes together as a whole. Once again, it becomes clear that two cultures completely unfamiliar with each other, have developed the same beliefs.

Gobekli Tepe.

One of the oldest ruins in the world, has been discovered in Turkey. This ruin is called Gobekli Tepe. This temple dates back approximately 11,500 years. I think the Pyramids in Egypt are even older. Very little is known about this temple, yet I also encountered the Serpent Bearer here. Everything revolves around pillar 43. In the image on the next page, there is a Vulture spreading its wings, and at its foot is the Scorpion. The Vulture is the constellation of the Serpent Bearer, which has the Scorpion at its foot. The sun resting on the Vulture's wing is the constellation of the Northern Crown, known to the ancient Greeks as the Temple of Delphi.

Note the angle of the Vulture's wings, pillar 43. These are at the same angle as the Serpent in the Serpent Bearer constellation.

Serpent Bearer/Apollo en Pillar 43, Gobekli Tepe.

It's clear that some constellations and their names are over 12,000 years old. This is why the Mayans and Aztecs knew about them. It's clear that the Serpent Bearer has often changed its identity. In this case, it's a Vulture spreading its wings and carrying the Northern Crown.

The story of Apollo and Heracles.

There are two Greek stories featuring the Serpent Bearer. Among the ancient Greeks, the Serpent Bearer is also known as Apollo. In that story, he battles the Serpent to protect the oracle of Delphi. This indicates that the constellation is associated with psychic gifts. In ancient Greek myth, the temple of Delphi was a place where people could convey their messages to the gods. The priestess was a Pythia (Serpent), and she was the oracle who stood between humanity and the gods.

Heracles is known for his wild adventures. In this Greek story, Chiron represents the Serpent Bearer. Heracles is tasked with defeating the Hydra to obtain its poison. Heracles defeats the Hydra and smears the poison on an arrow. Through sheer clumsiness, Heracles drops his arrow into Chiron's foot, causing him to become terminally ill and ultimately trade his immortality for death.

This story refers to the position of the constellations. Heracles, as a constellation, is located above the Serpent Bearer. If you draw a straight line downward from Heracles, towards the zodiac, you will arrive at Chiron's foot. At Chiron's foot is Scorpio, which is the sign of its incurable poison. This Scorpio stings the Serpent Bearer in his foot. In short, Heracles is the constellation of Heracles, Chiron is the constellation of the Serpent Bearer, and the Hydra is the constellation of the Scorpio.

Geometry.

I like to be guided by my impulses. One of those impulses I once had, had to do with geometry. I wanted to come up with the solution myself, because the current form must have been too complex for our ancestors. In short, I suspected they had a simpler method.

I wondered how our ancestor's viewed geometry. It must be a model that is easy to understand. When I started this assignment, I realized that everything had to follow fixed rules.

1. Rule number one: The figure must always be in balance with itself.
2. Rule number two: If one exists, then the other also exists.
3. Rule number three: The third rule is a method. Figure one, as a geometric figure, consists of one connecting point. Figure two consists of two connecting points, and so on.
4. Rule number four: The maximum number of figures is nine.

This was at a time when I was not yet familiar with the Gods and their identity. It took me three attempts to rediscover the entire model. I made a mistake at the beginning that prevented me from solving it. In the second rule, I refer to duality. It's black versus white. By applying duality, situations arise where the figure is not in balance with itself, which violates rule one. After much thought, I discovered that there are three different shapes. We have the order neutral, negative, and positive; see the 213 pattern. In rule number two, I use three different marbles. The blue marble is neutral, the red marble negative, and the black marble positive. I also use a three-by-three frame. Once I've entered all the information, I connect all the dots to create figures. See the following images.

Did you notice? From step 3 through step 9, we see the construction plan of a pyramid.

- Step 1: The circle is the symbol of infinity.
- Step 2: The all-seeing eye. (God)
- Step 3: The first step of creation. Side view of a pyramid.
- Step 4: The bottom view of a pyramid.
- Step 5: The top view of a pyramid. (Leo)
- Step 6: Fold the figure and you have one of the four cornerstones.
- Step 7: A building block of a pyramid.
- Step 8: Unfolded pyramid.
- Step 9: The top view of an eight-sided pyramid. (Serpent Bearer)

Each pyramid symbolizes a lion. It corresponds to the original shape of the Sphinx. There is one pyramid that deviates because it has eight sides. It is figure nine and represents the Serpent Bearer. At nine units, Leo represents the point of ultimate balance and equilibrium, thus replacing the function of Libra. With Leo, everything revolves around loyalty, leadership, and service. It is the symbol of the king.

In the distant past, the Serpent Bearer was known as a constellation. Today, it is no longer recognized. However, if you want to unravel the mystery surrounding the Pyramids, you must be aware of these 13 constellations and their order. The Serpent Bearer was once the most sacred zodiac sign in existence, and represents hidden knowledge and wisdom. The Pyramids conceal a certain frequency, which you can only notice when looking at the map, combined with geometry.

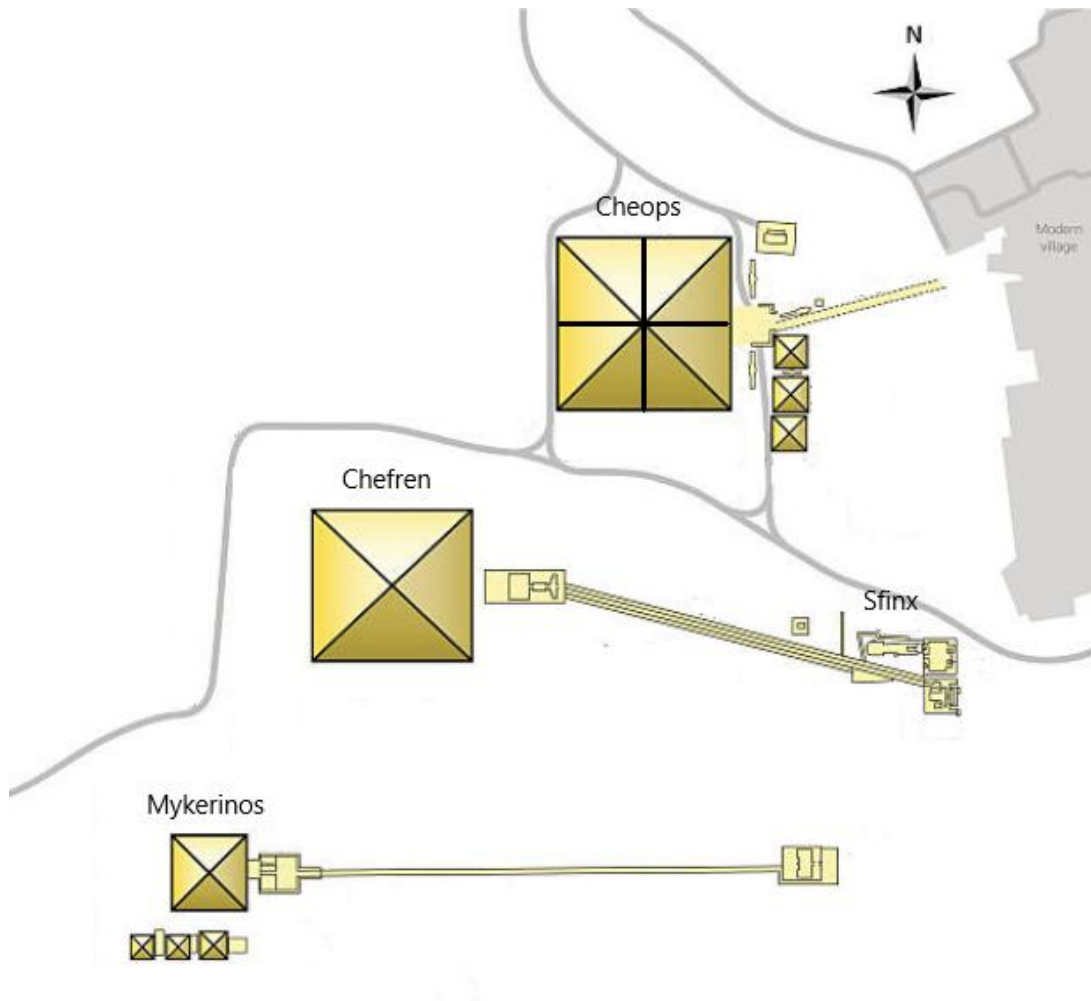

- There are six small pyramids of geometric figure 5.
- There are two medium-sized pyramids of geometric figure 5, and we have the Sphinx (Lion).
- There is a single pyramid, the largest of which is called Cheops, representing figure 9.

Top view of Cheops, it is a pyramid with 8 sides.

Here's a calculation going from smallest to largest, combined with numerology:

- 6 small pyramids of figure 5 =  $30 = (3 + 0) = 3$ . Gemini.
- 2 medium-sized pyramids of figure 5 + Sphinx =  $15 = (1 + 5) = 6$ . Virgo.
- 1 large pyramid (Cheops) of figure 9 = 9. Serpent Bearer.
- There are 9 pyramids in total.

As you can see, with a bit of fiddling, the frequency of 369 emerges. With modern astrology, which only includes 12 zodiac signs, this mystery would never have been solved. For me, it's an indication that the Pyramid was built by humanity, and I suspect they had help. It's in honor of the God of the afterlife and the millennia-old knowledge of geometry. They, too, were dedicated to the pure Serpent Bearer, which dates back more than 12,000 years. I base this on their obsession with the Lion, which existed in the year 10,948 BC. The Pyramids are therefore many times older than we thought and were not built by the Egyptian people.

My UFO experience.

On February 29, 2016, I had an experience with a UFO. The remarkable thing about that experience, was the way it all unfolded. It was February 27, 2016, and I was preoccupied with so many topics. I was losing track of things, so I decided to focus on just a few. I was narrowing things down. One of those topics was UFOs. I had no experience with this subject whatsoever, even though I'd been staring out my window for years. The videos I saw were all computer-generated. After seeing them, I was completely done with them. I also made it very loud and clear, that I wanted nothing more to do with this subject.

Two days later, I'm looking out my window while smoking, and from my left, I see a large object emerge from a tiny, dissolving cloud. It hung completely weightless in the air. It was shaped like a regular rocket, and I suspect it was three to four stories tall. It also hung vertically in the air, floating as if gravity had no effect whatsoever.

At that moment, I couldn't believe my eyes and decided to slap myself in the face several times. Then I grabbed a camera and walked back to the window. By then, it had already changed positions. It drifted horizontally through the air to the right, until it arrived beneath a thicker layer of clouds. This rocket made no sound, and there were no combustion engines visible. What I also found remarkable was that this rocket had no thrusters to allow it to move sideways. Its physical appearance was completely bare.

Everything changed the moment it entered the larger cloud. This was the moment it began to ascend, and a very thick cloud of smoke billowed from the tail. Still there were no signs of fire coming from the tail. It looked very much like the density of volcanic ash. Still, no sound was detectable, even though these engines should have roared with sound. So, as it ascends, it draws a very thick black line across the sky. I see its tail disappear into the clouds, and then a burst of air is released from the tail. This burst of air dispersed the line into two parts, drifting away from each other, until it was no longer visible.

Yet again, I have gained a unique experience. While watching everything unfold, I took many photos. The end result was that all the photos were ruined. None of the photos were saved, and the only one that did work, was completely white. As you can see, I get to experience all sorts of things in life, but being able to provide physical proof, is simply not an option. As you can imagine, I'm still incredibly annoyed about it, to this day.

The Construction of the Pyramids.

I just discussed the Pyramid in terms of geometry. As you can see, a building plan emerges. This, however, isn't the only thing that makes the Pyramid special. It's the way it was built. It's striking that ancient geometry shows a connection to the Pyramid. It's also very striking that the pyramids themselves don't have any hieroglyphs, and a mummy has never been found. The ancient Pyramids are a true mystery to many, but not to me. Here are a few wonders.

- The limestone comes from a quarry located more than 50 miles away. Each stone has therefore traveled a distance of more than 50 miles.
- The stones are unbearably heavy and large. Each stone weighs between 2,000 and 50,000 kilos.
- The Great Pyramid alone consists of over 2,300,000 blocks of limestone. That's just one Pyramid.
- They not only managed to transport these stones, but they also managed to stack them incredibly high. It's almost as tall as the Eiffel Tower. In fact, the Eiffel Tower was the first monument in the world to surpass the height of the Great Pyramid.
- They built not one, but several pyramids during the same time period. It seems very likely that all the pyramids were built within a very short time of each other.

I can explain all these wonders with just one word: weightlessness. My UFO experience was like that of a time traveler. I witnessed weightlessness with my own eyes. The UFO I saw was the size of two jumbo jets and was perfectly vertical in the air. It was large and heavy, but hung there as if gravity didn't exist. Weightlessness makes it possible to transport 2,300,000 stones, weighing over 50,000 kilos, each over a distance of more than 50 miles. Not only that, but you can also stack them incredibly high without using any complicated techniques, and they are quick to build. All problems have been solved by the power of anti-gravity.

Yet, we haven't solved all the problems. We're faced with the problem that cutting a single stone takes several days or weeks. It takes an incredibly long time with our current technology. It seems very likely that they had laser technology at their disposal, which cut the stone for them. I think I've accidentally found a clue to this, on a completely different continent. In this case, we have to go to the United States. I came across a video of someone searching for ancient civilizations. He first found some wall paintings and discovered that the mountain was carved into blocks. Erosion caused the blocks to fall apart. Just to be clear, he's walking on top of a mountain and there are signs of ancient human activity.

Massive Building Blocks, Monument Valley, United States.

Ancient wall paintings point to human activity.

When it comes to the creation of the stones, it seems very likely that they used laser cutting techniques and computers. All the stones are perfectly aligned, and in my opinion, not even a piece of paper fits between them. Not only that, but they were also cut from the bottom. You don't do that with a saw. It seems very likely that computers were used, given the perfect cutting. They possessed techniques that we will rediscover in the future. It appears that this monument was built by humans, in collaboration with time travelers or even aliens.

Blocks fall apart due to erosion.

The blocks are pre-cut like a cake. Laser technology?

As you can see, we have experienced times when we used techniques, that are completely forgotten today. It seems we once experienced weightlessness and had laser techniques to cut large stones. I think it points towards alien activity. The only way to cut these stones like this, is by hovering weightlessly above them as a machine. This is called 3D cutting technology. Is this a hidden hint of a spacecraft? In short, everything points to us having already coexisted with aliens or time travelers.

So, the idea isn't new, and it indicates they are observing us today. They're clearly not contacting us, yet if they wanted to destroy us, they would have done so long ago. Compared to their knowledge and technology, we humans are completely hopeless.

Chronos.

Somehow, I've always felt the need to make the annual calendar fit. It's a kind of puzzle I want to solve, using logic. I really don't like the chaotic pattern of the current calendar. I can't find any logical connection in it. However, there was an annual calendar before this Roman model was imposed on everyone. I've been puzzling over this for many years, and I love taking on the challenge myself. The mistake I made all that time, was that I was focusing on the wrong model. I was stuck in tunnel vision.

The defining characteristic of time, is its connection to the number 6. When I was processing my dreams on paper, it was exactly six years later, down to the precise minute. Here too, the number 6 has the quality of time. Virgo, which is part of the Serpent Bearer, is the number 6 and represents Mother Earth. So, when solving our calendar, I focus solely on the number 6. I often have an idea and then develop it to see if it leads anywhere. In this case, it's all about the number 6 and the division of time. Let's honor this number and see if we can make the annual calendar work, without adding a leap day or a decimal. What I also know is that our distant ancestors already determined the division of time. Notice what happens by simply simplifying. In this concept, I use 6 weekdays. The number 9 represents completeness. In other words, the cycle is complete.

- We have 60 seconds in a minute. ( $6 + 0 = 6$ )
- We have 60 minutes in an hour. ( $6 + 0 = 6$ )
- We have 3,600 seconds in an hour. ( $3 + 6 + 0 + 0 = 9$ )
- We have 24 hours in a day. ( $2 + 4 = 6$ )
- We have 1,440 minutes in a day. ( $1 + 4 + 4 + 0 = 9$ )
- We have 6 days in a week. ( $6$ )
- We have 144 hours in a week. ( $1+4+4 = 9$ )

The day is also divided into six parts. We have night, midnight, morning, noon, afternoon, and evening.

Let me assume that our ancestors used 360 days as a basis for a year. This would mean there is a gap in the actual year. Each year represents 5.25 missing days. If I make this an eight-year period, I arrive at a 42-day difference ( $4+2 = 6$ ). I can solve this problem by adding a six-day week to each year, and omitting this extra week every eighth year. In short, we have seven years of 366 days and a single eighth year of 360 days to close the period. This also means that after every eight years, a new period begins. So, we have seven years of 366 days, representing a total of 61 weeks. The eighth year has 360 days, which completes the entire cycle and consists of 60 weeks. In short, I seem to have finally found the solution, on the true yearly calendar. No decimals, and I've kept the number 6 in complete harmony. Notice what happens when I simplify.

- So, we have 60 seconds in a minute. ( $6 + 0 = 6$ )
- We have 60 minutes in an hour. ( $6 + 0 = 6$ )
- We have 24 hours in a day. ( $2 + 4 = 6$ )
- We have 6 days in a week. ( $6$ )
- Each year has 366 days. ( $3 + 6 + 6 = 15 = 1 + 5 = 6$ ).
- The eighth year has 60 weeks. ( $6 + 0 = 6$ )
- The eighth year has 360 days in a year. ( $3 + 6 + 0 = 9$ . Completion)

As you can see, the number 6 is completely honored, and that is of enormous importance.

All or nothing.

I want to conclude this book by focusing on the behavior of the number 9. Sagittarius and Scorpio, are extremes of each other. I therefore see the Serpent Bearer as a split personality. Yet, when you bring these two extremes together, they present a complete unity. What one lacks, the other has; what the other lacks, the one has. The number 9 consists of pure extremes. It sacrifices itself, or it completely destroys the other from existence. This behavior forms a piece of the puzzle to my behavior as a Serpent Bearer, where everything revolves around sacrifice or destruction. The Serpent Bearer is characterized by extremes. It is all or nothing.

To clarify this, we will add in the first example, and multiply in the second. Let's say we're using the number seven. No matter how many nines I add to the seven, the seven always retains its identity.

- $7 + 9 = 16 = 1 + 6 = 7$ .
- $7 + 999 = 1006 = 1 + 0 + 0 + 6 = 7$ .
- $799 + 99 + 999 = 1,897 = 1 + 8 + 9 + 7 = 25 = 2 + 5 = 7$ .

As you can see, the nine sacrifices itself to preserve another's dignity. This means that the Serpent Bearer symbolizes self-sacrifice. Now we're going to change the rules. Instead of adding, we'll only multiply.

- $9 \times 7 = 63 = 6 + 3 = 9$ .
- $999 \times 123 = 122,877 = 1 + 2 + 2 + 8 + 7 + 7 = 27 = 2 + 7 = 9$ .
- $9 \times 67 \times 82 \times 41 = 2,027,286 = 2 + 2 + 7 + 2 + 8 + 6 = 27 = 2 + 7 = 9$ .

This is the moment when the Serpent Bearer is completely dominant. In this case, it destroys the other and replaces itself. No matter which random numbers you add to the 9, it always ends in 9. The same applies to the multiple of 9.

- $18 \times 7 = 126 = 1 + 2 + 6 = 9$ .
- $27 \times 87 = 2,349 = 2 + 3 + 4 + 9 = 18 = 1 + 8 = 9$ .
- $36 \times 565 = 5,085 = 5 + 0 + 8 + 5 = 18 = 1 + 8 = 9$ .

As you can see, the Serpent Bearer consists of pure extremes; it is all or nothing. It sacrifices itself for the other, or it destroys the other and replaces itself. See my story of the Antichrist. I finish the corruption and replace it with my own knowledge. When calculating Odin's formula, something remarkable also happens. The 9 always counters itself. He can't change his identity, so he always forms his own counter or enemy.

I'm my own worst enemy.

Thank you for reading my message!
I hope my message serves you well.
